BURY POLIO FOREVER

POLIO MAY BE buried today in Ouachita Parish alongside small pox, diphtheria and tetanus as make-up clinics are conducted in the oral immunization campaign with Sabin vaccine. If you have not already been immunized, medical authorities have urged taking the vaccine today. (Drawing by Jerry Haynes)

PARTICIPATION URGED

Polio Make-Up Clinics Set In Ouachita Parish Today

The Ouachita Parish Medical Society and the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce announced Saturday that they are ready for today's make-up feeding of the oral Sabin polio vaccine. Eight clinics (see locations and addresses on this page) have been set up to care for those who missed last week's feeding.

Robbers Torture Elderly Man With Hot Iron

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Two gunmen, posing as postal messengers, forced their way into 70-year-old Lee Crawford's home Friday night and tortured him with a hot iron until he told them where to find $1,300 in cash and $5,000 worth of jewelry.

Police Capt. O. R. Brown, in charge of an investigation, said Saturday he had no suspects. Identification experts checked the iron for fingerprints. Brown said Crawford did not recognize the bandits.

The bandits handcuffed Crawford and his wife and tied up a 60-year-old guest, Mrs. Mary Stephens.

They blindfolded the victims and demanded money and jewels. Crawford refused to tell.

One of the gunmen found an electric iron. He ran the iron over Crawford's leg until he screamed out the location of the valuables.

"I thought they were bluffing with the iron," Crawford told police. "But when they put it on my leg I told them where the money was."

"He suffered 'very bad burns' and was treated in a hospital."

Medical authorities have urged residents of Ouachita Parish to take the vaccine. They said that if at least 30,000 persons take the vaccine today — those who missed last time — the disease will be eliminated from the parish. They said 85 per cent immunization is necessary for the program to be a complete success.

The vaccine, they explained, will eliminate the carrier for polio in those immunized, a function not served by the Salk injection. Thus, spread of the polio virus is stopped.

ALL SHOULD TAKE

Everyone above the ages of three months is advised to take the vaccine including polio victims. Doctors said Friday that even though a person has been stricken by the disease previously he should take the oral vaccine.

Clinics will be open today from noon until 5 p.m. The Monroe Jaycees, who have underwritten the program, have asked that each individual taking the immunization donate at least 25 cents.

184 YEARS LATER

Students Following Clark's Footsteps

ST. FRANCISVILLE, Ill. (AP)—George Rogers Clark's Rangers never had it so good on the march as have 15 young hikers following the frontiersmen's footsteps 184 years later.

The intrepid Bloomington, Ind., hikers, led by William P. Garrison, history teacher at University High School, and including his son, Matt, 10, expect to reach Vincennes, Ind., on Sunday in time for a noon reception at the Clark Memorial there.

Gov. Matthew Welsh of Indiana is expected to be on hand.

The original marchers of the 240-mile route taken by Garrison and his crew—most of them teenagers and history students from Garrison's classes—were Clark's men. They made the march, from Kaskaskia, to capture a British outpost at Vincennes.

The Indiana band spent Friday night in the home of James Ferguson and his wife, Judy, at Sumner, Ill. The Fergusons, hearing that the group planned to sleep outdoors in Red Hills State Park, intercepted them and invited them to enjoy the comforts of a home.

Saturday morning, Garrison said the Fergusons' hospitality was typical of the band encountered all along the line of march.

"We had to ship home 200 pounds of supplies from Noble, in Richland County, on Friday, because we were getting loaded down," he said. "People were just anxious to give us something—food mostly."

Two Confess Plot To Kill French Chief

Pipe-Smoking Woman, Captain Admit To Roles

PARIS (AP)—A pipe-smoking woman language teacher and a navy artillery captain have confessed auxiliary roles in the latest assassination plot against President Charles de Gaulle, informed sources said Saturday.

The two are Pauline Rousselot de Laffite, 55, and Capt. Robert Poinard, 37. They were among five persons arrested Thursday night for questioning about a plan to shoot De Gaulle in broad daylight Friday.

Both were quoted as saying the plot was called off even before they were taken into custody. By this account the mastermind was a fugitive terrorist of the outlawed Secret Army Organization, Georges (The Limper) Watin.

QUESTIONING

Informants said the two, under intensive police questioning, said they were supposed to get triggermen supplied by Watin into the French Ecole Militaire (military school) when De Gaulle inspected that institution Friday, then hide them after the shooting.

The sources said two other officers in custody—Capt. Maurice Mauboult d'Arbaumont, a Foreign Legionnaire who saw combat in Indo-China, and Capt. Jacques Gye-Jacquot, 40, an army veterinarian at the school—probably will be released.

Poinard's wife, 25, who said she had seen Watin visit her husband, has already been freed.

Applications

For Exemption Now Available

Signing of application forms for the 1963 homestead exemptions in Ouachita Parish will begin Monday, Bert Coverdale, parish assessor, has announced.

The forms have been prepared and are available for signing in Coverdale's office on the first floor of the parish court house.

In announcing the signing of the applications, Coverdale stressed the importance of each homeowner completing the forms. Unless the forms are signed, the homeowner will not be eligible for reductions in state and parish taxes.

"There will be no lines in the office until near the deadline on April 15, and we are urging property owners to come by the office as soon as possible," Coverdale said. "This will make it quicker for the home owners to take this necessary step without any delay."

The office is open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SIX AREA youths answered the President's challenge to the Marine Corps to prove their physical fitness by making 50-mile hikes. At the right, circling the quarter-mile Neville High school track are Robert Goorley, right, and Edmond Burton. On the left, four Northeast State college students who started a 50-mile trek at midnight Saturday and are hoping to be back in town by 8 p.m. The four boys, reading left to right, are Jack Nolan, Shelby Gilley, Woody Pence, and John Ciriello. They are preparing the two packs they will carry. (Staff Photos by Ben Bradford)

Nuclear Ban Negotiations Near Failure

GENEVA (AP)—The nuclear test ban negotiations teetered Saturday on the brink of failure after 1 1/2 years of diplomatic effort.

The Americans and Soviets each offered concessions but they remained hopelessly divided on the basic problem of on-site inspections. While nothing in diplomacy can be regarded as irreversible, it is difficult to see how a treaty halting nuclear tests now can be drafted that will be acceptable to the United States and to the Soviet Union.

Ironically, this disappointing prospect came to light at the very moment when it seemed success was in sight.

LIMIT CHECKS

The Soviet Union finally accepted the principle of on-site inspection, but then limited such checks to two or three a year on Russian soil. Informants said that figure is too small ever to be accepted by the Kennedy administration or the U.S. Senate.

The American and British concept of eight to 10 such inspections a year seems to horrify the Russians. That many checks would funnel spies into the Soviet Union, they say.

The 8-to-10 figure represents a scaling down of enforcement arrangements originally insisted upon by the Americans and British. At one time the Western side insisted on 20 on-site inspections. This was accompanied by a demand for 15 international control posts in various parts of the Soviet Union.

Now the whole international control post idea has been scrapped in favor of relying on existing national detection systems supplemented by seven to 10 block boxes—automatic seismic stations—on Soviet soil. The Russians will accept only three block boxes.

New Bearings Are Believed Cause Of Fall

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—A new set of bearings under a trapeze bar may have caused Mary Lou Lawrence, 26, to miss her grip and fall 30 feet to a concrete floor during a circus performance here.

Miss Lawrence, billed as the "Hollywood Skyrocket" with the William Kay Circus, fought for her life in a hospital bed Saturday as her parents kept a bedside vigil.

She was swinging on a trapeze Friday when she tried to switch hands and plunged to the floor before a stunned opening day audience of 2,000 at Dane County fair grounds.

Bud Jeffreys, who grew up in Valparaiso, Ind., and knew Mary Lou since she was 11, said "she had done the act before and knew it well. But she just had new bearings put in under the bar and evidently, they caught her by surprise."

Miss Lawrence, a native of Crown Point, Ind., suffered an apparent basal skull fracture, a fractured collarbone and possible internal injuries.

ANTISUBMARINE WEAPON

Robot Helicopters Added To Arsenal

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—A faint blip appears on a destroyer's sonar scope. It could mean trouble. A computation is made. An order is issued quickly.

A small but hefty robot helicopter picks up two homing torpedoes and hops off the destroyer's fantail.

The unknown object that caused the blip is many miles away. It is well beyond the range of any antisubmarine weapon the destroyer had until the robot joined its arsenal.

In a matter of minutes, the robot nears the target area, for the torpedo carrier's speed is far greater than that of any naval ship or conventionally launched torpedo. When it reaches the tar-

Shots Fired Across Bow Are Ignored

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP)—U.S. Navy planes intercepted the hijacked Venezuelan freighter Anzoategui and fired rockets across her bow Saturday, but the ship's pro-Communist captors ignored U.S. orders to change course for Puerto Rico.

Riding high in the water, the gray-white freighter steamed steadily down the South American coast at 15 knots, its hijackers apparently intent on haven in Brazil.

U.S. Navy planes dogged the freighter's wake Saturday night, and two Venezuelan bombers were reported en route to the scene. Two Venezuelan destroyers also were reported giving chase.

RACE TIME

The hijackers apparently were in a race against time to get to a port that might offer them safe asylum before the ship could be intercepted at sea and boarded.

The Brazilian navy ordered its warships to seize the pirated ship if she turned into a Brazilian port. A high Brazilian government source indicated, however, that the hijackers would be granted political asylum in Brazil and the ship would be returned to Venezuela.

In Caracas, the leftist newspaper Clarin said the Anzoategui was bound for the nearest Brazilian port of Belem, at the mouth of the Amazon River.

The Anzoategui was about 800 miles northwest of Belem when U.S. Navy planes spotted her about dawn, some 140 miles north of the French Guiana coast.

Twice the ship was given an or-

Sas-Jaworski To Talk Here To Teachers

Dr. Alexander Sas-Jaworski, famed as the most awarded foreign-born American, will be the featured speaker at the public relations dinner of the Delta District Teachers' Association.

The fourth annual event is scheduled Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Pardon Supper Club, the association president Mrs. Irene Smith of Monroe announced.

Dr. Sas-Jaworski, a native of the Ukraine in Russia, has been making victorious speeches in Alaska, the Soviet Union, and elsewhere.

He has been awarded numerous prizes and citations for his international speaking and writing, his humanitarian efforts, and his contributions to the peace movement.

During World War II, when the German army was advancing from the west, he fled to the United States, where he joined the Red Cross.

Five years later he joined the U.S. Army and served in the Pacific theater, where he was decorated for his valor.

His first job in the new country was as a radio announcer in the New York City radio station, WABC.

Soon Dr. Sas-Jaworski became a well-known radio personality, and he has since appeared on many radio and television programs.

He is now a resident of New York City, where he continues to be active in the peace movement.

Dr. Sas-Jaworski has recently returned from a tour of the Soviet Union, where he was received with great honor.

He is now planning to visit the United States again, where he will continue to speak for peace.

His visit to the United States is part of a larger tour of the Americas, where he will be speaking in many cities.

Dr. Sas-Jaworski is a member of the United Nations, and he has been awarded many international prizes.

der to turn back and head for Puerto Rico, U.S. territory. There was no reply.

Then one of three U.S. planes overhead swooped in and fired rockets across the bow.

At this, the ship radioed, "Being attacked by North American aircraft."

AP correspondent Horst Buchholz, who with other newsmen flew on a Navy plane to the area, said the rockets were intended to persuade the freighter to change its course.

However, a Defense Department spokesman in Washington said they were fired merely "to attract the attention of the ship so they could communicate. The ship did not respond and continued on its course."

The spokesman said he did not know the number or kind of rockets used. "I imagine it was some kind of smoke rocket," he said. "They have had difficulty communicating with the ship. This was the purpose of the rockets."

"The ship is merely under surveillance," the spokesman added, "and it probably will be kept under surveillance all night."

The elusive freighter was located 67 hours after the United States officially joined the search for her at noon Wednesday at the request of the Venezuelan government.

The search operation was carried out by the 10th Naval Command at San Juan, Puerto Rico. Surveillance operations then were shifted to Port of Spain's Piarco Airfield in this newly independent Caribbean island nation off the northeast coast of Venezuela.

Cdr. Russell E. Blalock of Cincinnati, Ohio, executive officer of Early Warning Squadron 4, was in command of the surveillance. He said he had seven Navy planes at his disposal to keep a round-the-clock watch on the Anzoategui and more if needed.

The Venezuelan government, etc., 6th graph to22 under Rio de Janeiro (date line)—Deleting 2nd NL to22 and Port of Spain precede 2-6-7-9.

The Venezuelan government shipping company, owners of the vessel, said she had enough fuel for 15 days when she left Venezuela Tuesday. Her top speed is said to be 15 knots.

Steering clear of U.S. ships and planes guarding the approaches to Cuba—believed originally to be the hijacker's destination—the Anzoategui appeared to be following the course of Portuguese rebel Capt. Henrique Galvao. He seized the Portuguese luxury liner Santa Maria two years ago to dramatize his opposition to Portugal's strong man premier, Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

Galvao sailed the Santa Maria with 950 captive passengers and crew into the northeast Brazilian port of Recife. He was granted political asylum in Brazil after turning the liner over to the Brazilian government. The government turned her back to the Portuguese owners.

The captors of the Anzoategui have said in several messages they are members of a guerrilla detachment of the Armed Forces for National Liberation (FALN), a Venezuelan organization engaged in hopes of upsetting the liberal, anti-Communist government of President Romulo Betancourt.

The seizure of the Anzoategui apparently was also part of an attempt to force Betancourt to cancel his visit with President Kennedy in Washington this week.

In Caracas, the Venezuelan navy remained silent about its plans for chasing the Anzoategui. But one source said two destroyers were heading full speed toward the fugitive vessel and hoped to intercept her by noon Sunday.

Free rides to polio clinics will be available again this Sunday.

Anyone without transportation of it. We hope everyone in Our Parish participate as readily as possible.

Questions about the vaccine or immunization will be answered today by wives of local doctors. The telephone number to call with questions is FAirfax 2-8155.

In emphasizing the importance of today's activity to defeat polio, Jaycee President Ed Rount said, "This is the most important project the Jaycees have ever conducted in Monroe. Evidence of what the Jaycees think about it is found in the fact that we have gotten 80 per cent participation by the membership. This is a record."

Attorneys Want Execution Site Laws Changed

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Louisiana's district attorneys want state executions be returned to the parish prisons instead of being held at the state penitentiary as present law provides.

The Louisiana District Attorneys agreed to back legislation making the parish prisons the site for executions.

Dist. Atty. Richard Kilbourne of Clinton, made the proposal at the association's final business session.

Kilbourne contended it would be a "tremendous deterrent to crime" if executions took place in the same parish where the capital crime was committed.

He also said it is possible for a convict sent to Angola for execution to be forgotten about and may wait for years before execution—if it ever occurs.

Bertrams DeBlanc of Lafayette was chosen president at Saturday's meeting. Other new officers include Sam Wells of Colfax, vice president; and Sargent Pitcher Jr., East Baton Rouge, secretary.

Pitcher said inaction on the part of the governor has resulted in interminably delayed execution. He said the proposed legislation also would correct this situation.

New officers of the state Assistant District Attorneys Association are William R. Coenen, Rayville, president; Walter P. Krons of Baton Rouge, vice president; and Jules L. Davidson Jr., Alexandria, secretary.

FLOATING DOCKS ORDERED

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP)—In hard international competition, the big Swedish shipyard group, Goetaverken has received a Soviet order for two floating docks, each capable of lifting 27,000 tons.

Another occupant of the death car, in which the patrol said all passengers were Negroes, was reported in serious condition in a Dothan hospital. She was identified as Jesse Lee Rhodes, 21.

The impact of the collision also opened a valve in the truck's tank, spewing gas over the victims and their demolished car. Fire units, rushed from Dothan and Headland, extinguished the flames.

Truck driver James Kirkland, 24, Abbeville, Ala., told patrolmen he saw the car parked on U.S. 131 about five miles north of Dothan just after he rounded a downhill curve.

Kirkland told officers the car had no lights. "I knew there was nothing I could do but hit it" when another car approached from the opposite direction, he said.

Roosevelt had suggested the same kind of hike to the Marine Corps to prove their fitness, and Kennedy repeated the challenge. However, it has taken hold of the national fancy with many other groups attempting to prove their fitness by taking a "long walk."

The Neville boys, Edmund Burton and Robert Goorley, figured it would take under 17 hours for them, resting 10 minutes after every four miles and walking the quarter-mile track 200 times.

They are well fortified with soft drinks, candy and other "morning" habits to keep them going and at last count had made it around the track 121 times at 9 p.m.—or 30 and one-quarter miles.

Former Lumber Company Boss, 73, Dies Friday

Four Crossett Youths Complete 50-Mile Hike

CROSSETT, Ark. (Special)—Four Crossett High School football players who started out at 6 a.m. Saturday five miles north of Monticello, Ark., completed a 50-mile trek to Crossett at 9 p.m.

The four youths, Tom Fleming, Andrew T. Wilson, Dennis Watts and Charles Watts, walked into Crossett Youth Center and wished off their grueling hike with a peppy twist.

The hikers kept up a fast pace until mid-afternoon when they slowed from an average of three miles per hour to two miles per hour 10 miles from Crossett.

Two of the mothers who brought food to the boys in mid-afternoon were asked if the boys were as brisk with lawn-mowers and leaf-raking replied, "No we have a hard time making connections along those lines."

Creating a new twist to what is becoming an old story, the hikers performed their post-walk dance in honor of a vow they had made.

Manufacturers Say Big Budget Cut Is Possible

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers said Saturday the proposed federal budget for the next fiscal year can be cut by at least $8.7 billion.

It said the possible savings were discovered in a preliminary review of the proposed $98.8-billion budget and that it will continue to seek other areas where savings can be made.

In a statement released here, the NAM called on Congress to heed the NAM's advice, saying "The federal government cannot spend money the Congress has not authorized it to spend."

Some $5.9 billion could be saved by refusing to grant authority for projects in the fields of housing, civil defense, foreign aid and public assistance, it said.

Another $2.8 billion could be trimmed by "preventing expenditures in a number of nonessential programs," including a $3-billion cut in assistance for school construction.

It said "every feasible control, reduction, deferment and elimination of federal program commitments should be undertaken."

The recommended cuts include: —$434 million by eliminating 4,600 defense family housing units; —$218 million by cutting back on civil defense shelters;

—$2,345 billion by reducing foreign economic assistance; —$410 million by cutting back public assistance programs;

—$1,215 billion "by turning down the administration's request for a vast new educational aid program."

It said tax rate reform "to release capital and incentives for economic growth and job creation is so essential to the welfare and security of the nation that it must have priority over many expenditures not essential to national security."

Concerning Congress' role, the NAM said, "It can refuse to finance programs except through the appropriation process, thus shutting the door to back-door spending."

FLEE RED BULGARIA

Ethiopians Ponder West Universities

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Afr-Bulgaria "backed by the government students disillusioned by their ment."

"We were called black monkeys and jungle people and nothing was done to protect us," they told the seven student leaders who were arrested touched off the mass demonstration last Tuesday still were unaccounted for. The Bulgarian government news agency said land race track and back. He's they were deported, but none of here now sweeping out the bar if they have shown up in Western Europe.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency Tass painted a picture of good life for African and other foreign students in Bulgaria. length."

In the Hague, Ghana's ambassador to Bulgaria, J. L. Appah Sampang, who flew there from Sofia with 20 Ghanaian students, conferred with Dutch officials on chances for the Africans to remain in the Netherlands.

Two girl students have already gone to Bonn, West Germany, where they hope to continue studies in dentistry. The 18 men left were undecided whether to continue efforts for a Dutch education or go on to West Germany.

The majority of the more than 350 African students who want to leave Bulgaria were still there, held up primarily by lack of money for airplane or train tickets. In Bulgaria, tickets for travel abroad must be paid for in hard currency which most of the students lack.

Fears were expressed here that their exit permits might expire or be canceled before they could get away.

The British legation in Sofia is reported looking out for the 20 Nigerians who have said they want to go, but most of the others lack diplomatic representatives who could help them.

A Ghanaian spokesman said he had reason to believe the Bulgarians were deliberately making it difficult for the rest to leave.

This would help minimize the propaganda blow of the mass exodus since Bulgaria could claim the appropriation process, thus shutting the door to back-door charges of racial discrimination in

EVERYONE WANTS IN ACT

Fitness Council Anxious For Hiking Fad To End

WASHINGTON (AP)—The old way it looks to President Kennedy's Council on Physical Fitness, everybody wants in the hiking act—many for publicity or profit. And the council, for one, will be glad when the fad subsides.

The council has been swamped by phone calls and letters from grandmothers, teen-agers, secretaries, college students, housewives, cross-country runners, businessmen and many others ever since Kennedy endorsed President Theodore Roosevelt's idea that a U.S. Marine should be able to hike 50 miles in 20 hours.

Some are proud and dedicated pedestrians, some crackpots, some with something to sell, some eager to escape boredom via the biggest fad since the hula hoop and many just itching to walk their names into the paper.

Richard Snider, council administrator, and V. L. Nicholson, the group's information director, listed these items Saturday:

"The man who called to insist that a 50-mile hike isn't much of a feat unless the hiker rolls a hoop. He just happened to have a stock of hoops."

"A gruff voice against a background of jukebox music, demanding:

"Is this 50-mile hike compulsory?"

"Assured it wasn't the caller commented: "Good. I don't think much of it anyway. I got a man working for me walking about 40 miles a day out to Pimlico (site of a Maryland land race track) and back. He's they were deported, but none of here now sweeping out the bar if they have shown up in Western Europe."

"The D. C. Road Runners that herby challenges the entire U.S. news agency Tass painted a picture of good life for African and other foreign students in Bulgaria. length."

"The Los Angeles man who called to announce he walked 14 miles twice in one week and 'I'd like to get a little recognition. I believe I'm the first man to walk the length of Wilshire Boulevard, non-stop."

When told 14 miles is not so much, he snapped "I'm 66 years

Final Hours Of Kassem's Life, Regime Are Disclosed

Editor's Note — Revolutions anywhere are unexpected and confused. That in Iran Feb. 8-9 was no exception. In the following story, an Associated Press correspondent from Cyprus gives a blow-by-blow account of how it was in Baghdad during the 36-hour battle which sent Abdel Karim Kassem down to defeat and death.

By ALEX FETVVOULOS

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — "Please, you are my brother. Please let me out of Baghdad. Let me go to Vienna," pleaded Abdel Karim Kassem to revolution leader Col. Abdel Salam Aref.

It was the final bid for life by the former Iraqi leader before he was executed after being swept out of power in the Feb. 8-9 revolution.

The last hours of Kassem's life — and of his regime — were disclosed Saturday by an army major who asked that his name be withheld because of the new regime's ban on personal publicity. He also gave a blow-by-blow account of the 36-hour battle for power in which 15 revolutionaries and 75 of Kassem's defenders were slain.

This is his story: Rebel forces with heavy tanks and armored personnel carriers headquarters in the Defense Ministry compound at 9 a.m. Friday, Feb. 8. The compound is a rectangle of buildings beside the Tigris River with a mosque attached to it.

A pitched battle against 600 defenders continued through the day and night until revolutionary forces crashed through into the building where Kassem lived at 11 a.m. Saturday. They first caught two generals — Sadu Medhafi, deputy governor general, and Mudir Harakat, commander of operations.

Tanks then rolled through the main gate and infantry drove past Kassem's apartment to the police building. They found Kassem's chief bodyguard, Gen. Wasfi Tahir, dead, he was shot in the stomach with a machine gun.

Kassem emerged from the ruins of the military police headquarters to surrender at 2 p.m. Saturday.

"He was carrying a transistor radio under one arm and waving the other, saying: 'I want to speak to my brother, Abdel Salam.'"

"He kept waving his arm and repeating: 'I want to speak to my brother.'"

"I could not tell if he was afraid, but he looked mad, as always."

Col. Fadh Abass Mahdawi, head of Kassem's People's Court, came out with Kassem shouting: "Please don't kill me, I haven't done anything here with the Rev. Leon Heath officiating."

A private soldier stepped up to Kassem and slapped him across the face, several times, the major said.

The major took Kassem and Mahdawi to the radio station to see Aref. Twelve officers formed a court-martial there and Aref, presiding, asked:

"Who made the 1958 revolution — you or me?"

"You," Kassem said.

"Why did you say you made the revolution and that I was a traitor?"

"No — I am a traitor," Kassem answered, "but please, you are my brother. Please let me go out of Baghdad, let me go to Vienna."

"Why did you shoot 100 of our brother officers who made the revolution with us?"

"It was not I that shot them — it was the court-martial," Kassem said.

Aref turned to Mahdawi. "Is this the chief of the court-martial? What does he understand about law?"

Mahdawi yelled: "Please don't kill me."

Aref asked Kassem to repeat what he had said into a tape recorder.

"If I do that you will kill me," Kassem said.

The court-martial found Kassem and Mahdawi guilty.

"They were taken into a small room, six feet by six feet, and space for the bodies to sprawl on the floor, perhaps his public office, not far from his private quarters."

News-men were shown Kassem's private quarters Saturday by revolutionary officers who pictured him as a luxury loving top. They displayed the thickly carpeted office and living quarters furnished with luxurious pieces imported from Scandinavia and Italy. There were racks of highly polished leather shoes.

"And he called himself a simple son of the people," said one officer bitterly.

Detailing the battle, the major said that at one point Kassem appealed to the Communists over a loudspeaker. "Save your revolution," he said, "they are practically immune from retaliation."

In another interview Saturday, Kassem's Foreign Minister Hashem Jawad told newsmen he had tried to quit the late dictator's government but had his life threatened when he did so.

Photographs of Kassem's body seem to show he was killed in a fair-sized room, big enough for at least four chairs and with enough space for the bodies to sprawl on the floor, perhaps his public office, not far from his private quarters.

Administration Braces For Onslaught Over Gap In Cuba Surveillance

WASHINGTON, AP — The Kennedy administration is bracing itself for an onslaught of criticism over its failure to detect the Soviet missile gap in Cuba, according to a source familiar with the situation in the White House. The source said the administration is aware of the gap and is working to close it. He said the administration is aware of the gap and is working to close it. He said the administration is aware of the gap and is working to close it.

What this surveillance showed was that the Soviet Union was moving toward installation of the intermediate range missile secret testimony after it has been given security censorship. The Stennis committee expects to hear testimony from the service chiefs of staff who have not figured in administration briefings. Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who of members of Congress and the radiation belt around the earth. These briefings have been outside the two previously covered belts. He said the Secretary of State charged particles in the new belt involve both the state of the nation and the Russian Undersecretary are "rather stable" and present an overall military posture George W. Ball, and John A. Mc-

Some members of Congress have predicted privately that the service chiefs may not support the position the administration maintained as late as Oct. 3, 1962, calling it partisan and irresponsible. But they have been more disturbed by the state-shifted their emphasis from the weapons in Cuba. Whatever its military import, testimony on this subject seems likely to have a bearing on the credibility of the administration's contention that offensive weapons have been removed from Cuba. The administration position is that while it had suspicions earlier, it could not afford to charge an offensive buildup until it had positive proof and it did not get this until Oct. 14. Administration leaders have struck back at Republican criticism.

The hobby of collecting old and rare guns is gaining more following in the area. As a result, local collectors have obtained the charter of a state-wide organization which aims at staging displays of old guns and fostering a better understanding of the history behind them.

Phantoms of history lurk in many local and area collections of old guns. And the stories behind the weapons range back over a period of several centuries.

In one collector's possession are gold finished pistols reported to have been made for a Dutch king. The fragmentary details available on some of the other ancient weapons indicate they were used to some degree in shaping many events of triumph and tragedy.

Because of the growing interest in gun collecting in the Twin Cities area, the Louisiana Gun Collectors Association, a non-profit organization, was chartered recently in Monroe. It previously had its charter at New Orleans.

Its present membership of more than 40 represents a cross section of persons engaged in many different lines of work who share a common interest. Some collect guns to preserve them as they are, while there are a few members with skills as gunsmiths who rework or restore some weapons.

ORGANIZED

The association was organized in 1959, with its first officers coming from New Orleans. Last year, officers from this area were named by the group.

A collector of German lugers, Herman Senn Jr., of Monroe, is president. Vice president is S. G. Harrington Jr., also of Monroe, and James Saterfiel of Fairbanks is secretary-treasurer. There are nine members on the board of directors.

The organization is losing no time in getting along with the objectives set forth for it. Among them being the "exchange of knowledge, information and ideas among its members . . . (and) . . . to arrange for and to hold meetings for the display and exhibition of arms, armor, both for the delectation of the membership and for that of the public in general . . ."

Its first local gun show, expected to draw thousands of unusual weapons from collections of several states, is scheduled for next Saturday and Sunday at the Virginia Hotel. It will be open to the public.

FROM WIDE AREA

In addition to firearms from around the state, weapons from collections in Texas, Florida, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Oklahoma, and California, have been promised for the show.

One member commented that the value of guns promised for display would run easily into many thousands of dollars.

The sizes and types of collections belonging to members of the association vary considerably.

One member, Bill Coggins, 1206 St. John Drive, has been collecting since 1954, and has around 300 guns, some of them dating as far back as the 1480's, and others from more recent times.

They vary in size from a 3 1/2-inch long 22 calibre Derringer pistol weighing only a few ounces, to a percussion type bench rifle of 1840 American vintage weighing 48 pounds.

THE PRESIDENT OF the Louisiana Gun Collectors Association, Herman Senn Jr. of Monroe, is a collector of German lugers.

his collection are two long barreled oriental match lock guns made around 1485, according to the best information available to him. From this type there are guns which range through such types as wheel-lock, flintlock, and percussion.

"I don't collect anything but antiques," said Coggins. "They are all of original type. Very few have had any work done on them. And 90 percent of them will fire."

NEVER FIRES THEM

However, Coggins never fires any of the old weapons.

"You never know about these old guns," he said, "they may blow up when you fire them. That's why I never fire them."

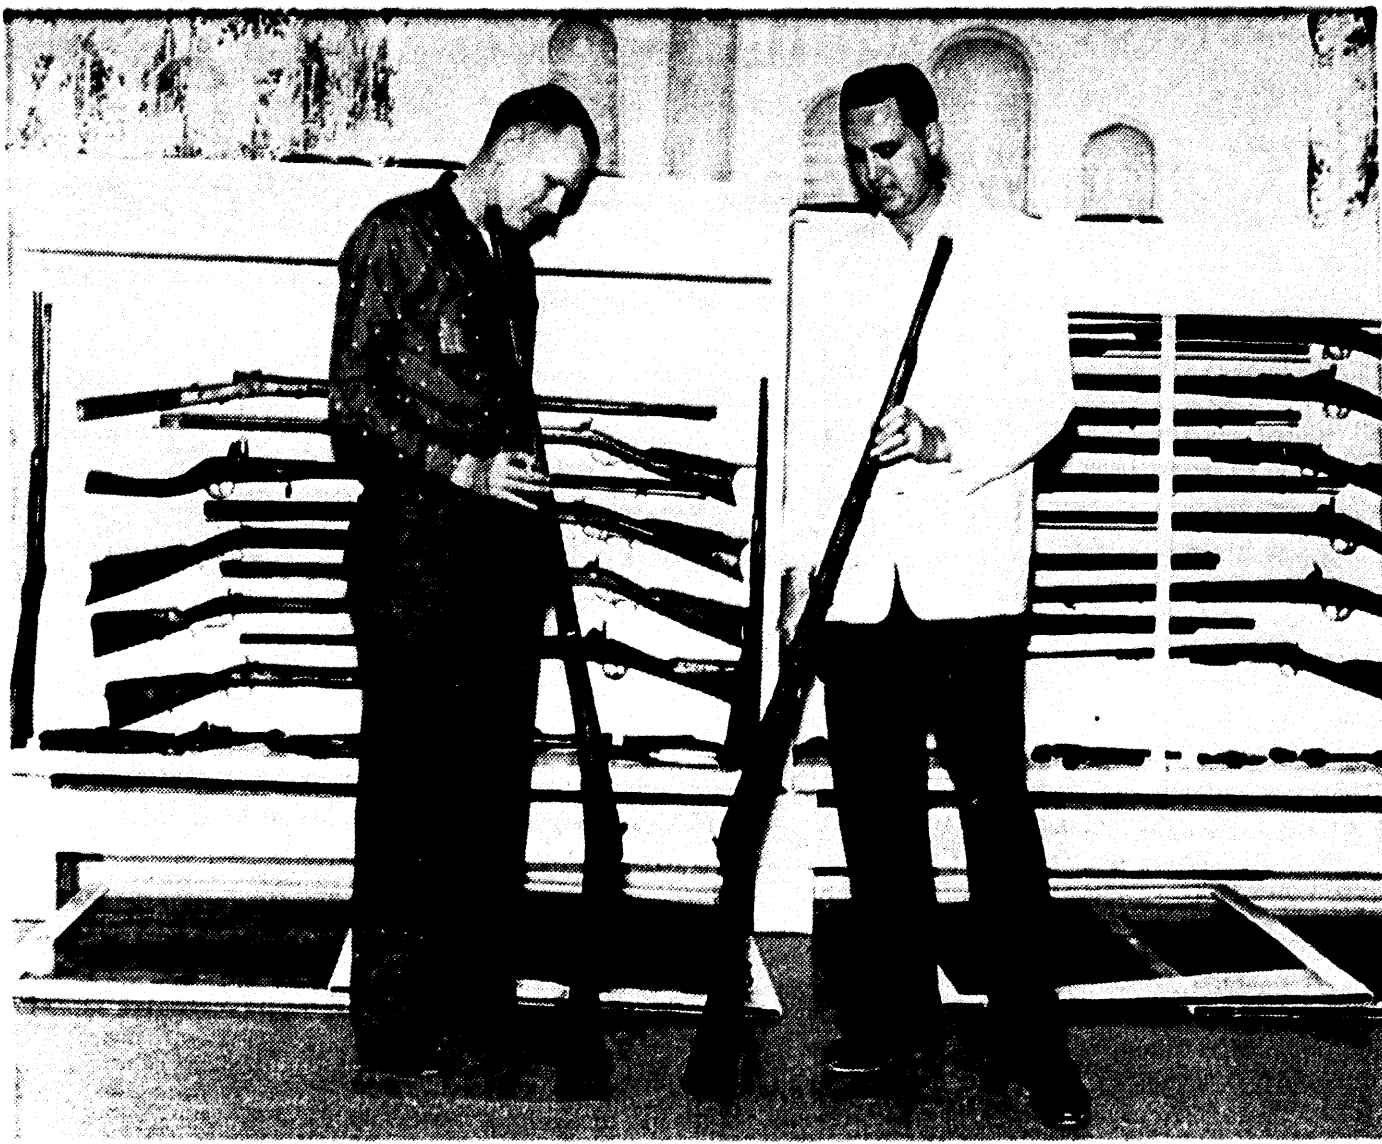

He displayed a gun that had been restored after a portion of the barrel was blown out in a firing mishap.

Some collectors do fire weapons in their collections, however.

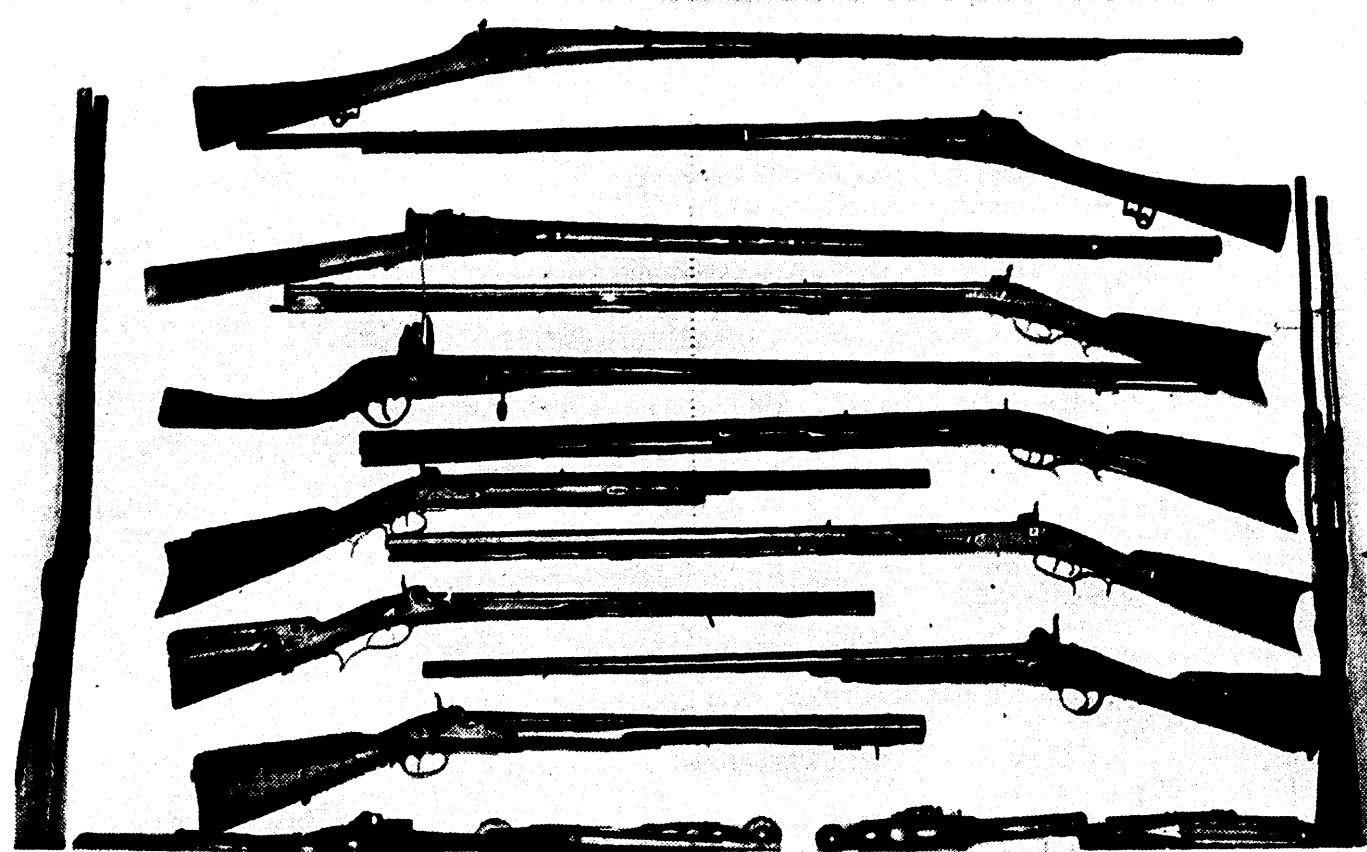

Coggins, 33, who is an auctioneer, travels to many places around the south. In his travels he has bought some rare guns, many were given to him, and he has traded for some.

Dude Rogers, 223 Lilac, West Monroe, another association member, in looking over Coggins' collection, pointed out how barrels on some early guns were rolled up in sections and forged. He said this type of gun was common in Europe before machinery came into use.

In Coggins' collection are dueling pistols, many in pairs, which were made in France, Holland and Germany.

Among the prize items in his collection are two ornate pistols trimmed in gold, which were made for a Dutch king.

PEPPERBOX GUN

An odd-looking weapon in the group is Sharp's pepperbox gun, made around 1850, and used in the Civil War. About five inches in length, it has four barrels.

Some tiny pistols in the collection are commonly referred to as "garter guns." Coggins said this reference came about as a result of some women carrying them under their garters.

Among the sturdier made guns in the collection are the Winchester rifles, lever action, dating from 1866 to 1895.

There are muzzle loading guns with egg shape barrels and others of the blunderbuss type which were used by the Pilgrims.

Along with these are Colt pistols, rifles, and shotguns from the period of the 1870's.

Rogers, who is a gunsmith as a hobby, has worked with his father-in-law, Arthur Dean, of Rocky Branch, in making six guns of various styles.

One of the guns is a two-shot Derringer type. Another, which Rogers described as "one of the prettiest we've made," is a .50 calibre rolling block saddle pistol.

'HORSE TRADING'

Rogers said that many persons who would like to collect guns have held back because they think it is a costly hobby. However, he pointed out, "A lot of it is just 'horse trading.' The collecting of old guns is picking up all the time."

One of the points stressed by the association is that its members must not misrepresent the guns in their collections. To maintain guns in good condition in the collection, said Rogers, it is necessary to oil them and care for them regularly, especially if they are handled.

The membership of the organization is divided into two classes:

Full membership and junior membership. Membership is open to both men and women. The association's goal is a membership of 400.

An early reference book indicates some of the problems encountered in using one of the types of guns in Coggins' collection, namely the matchlock. In this type the gunlock contained a match, usually of cord, which was ignited to the point of glowing so it could be moved into position to cause detonation of the powder charge.

Dampness often made it difficult to light the matchlock cord or to keep it lighted until the proper time for firing.

In early times artillerymen used to mix powder for their weapons on the battlefield. On occasions a strong surge of wind would blow the powder over onto the infantrymen's matchlocks with matches aglow, and disaster would result.

This made it difficult to recruit matchlock gunners, since life expectancy was short.

Year-Around 'Holiday Fever' Changes Vacation Trends

By ROGER LANE

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time, Mr. American worked all year for a two-week summer vacation to relax and store up enough energy to work all year around.

The pattern has changed drastically under the impact of a growing prosperity.

Now there are such things as off-season vacations, winter vacations, second vacations in either the winter or off-season either as a supplement to the summer frolic or a substitute for it, corporate group vacations, etc.

The net effect has been to turn vacation-going into a year-long affair.

RECREATION SEEKERS

By one guess, six million recreation-seekers will gambol under the southern sun or cavort at away-from-home ski, toboggan or ice-boating resorts before the 1962-63 winter season ends.

Not all are vacationers in the traditional sense of pa and ma packing the kids off to a north-woods lake for two weeks in July. Nor will all who are such vacationers break away again for a week or two later in the year.

But they are holidayers. And they attest to a change in American living habits attuned to bigger incomes, more leisure, the quest for status and cheaper and speedier travel — among other things.

The year-around holiday fever has had a big economic impact. It has ballooned cruise business, air travel, clothing, sports equipment, hotel and motel building, advertising, oil, retailing, bank and finance company lending—nearly the whole economy.

OFF-SEASON VACATIONING

A recent trade study showed that 45 per cent of vacationing is done

Under the impact of a growing prosperity summer has lost its ranking as the only major vacation season. And many businesses have been given a tonic through the spending of people on off-season, winter, or second vacations.

off season — fall, winter and spring compared with 10 per cent in 1947. Consider what has happened to: Puerto Rico, a sunny, once-lazy Caribbean isle, and, at the opposite end of the pole, to the world of skiing.

A decade ago, Puerto Rican hotels boasted 507 rooms, enough to handle about 65,000 mainland visitors who spent $7 million a year.

In 1962, hotel rooms had jumped to 4,000 — with 1,500 more planned or being built. Nearly 450,000 million visitors flocked to the island, and spent $66 million there.

Hotel bookings for the Christmas - New Year period close out four months ahead of time.

The spreading boom has exploded all over the Caribbean area, touching romantic spots little heard of 10 years ago.

In sheer volume, however, the traffic doesn't hold a candle to familiar winter playgrounds in Florida. From December, 1961 through March, 1962 some 4 1/2 million visitors entered the state by car, bus, train and airplane.

They averaged 15 days in the state and spent $160 on the average.

Skiing, once a pursuit of rugged males, has turned into a sport for families, including tots, and some ski resorts into meccas for snow bunnies hunting boy friends and husbands.

Sales of ski apparel and equipment rocketed past $85 million last year, up 471 per cent in a decade. Ski resort operators from Alaska to the Carolinas spent $140 million on chairlifts, aerial tramways and the like.

The number of ski areas passed 800.

Ed Engle, the National Retail Merchants Association sales promotion manager, said more than half ski apparel sales are in the "apres ski" category — capri pants, cabana suits, blouses, costume jewelry, cloth shoes and accessories intended for lodge firesides.

"Some call it merchandise for snow bunnies. You'd be surprised how many young women on a skiing weekend never go near a ski slide," Engle said.

Who else is the year around holidayer?

High and middle income bracket professional men and business executives swell the ranks as in the past.

So do successful Main Street merchants and their wives, druggists, salesmen, honeymooners, secretaries and appliance dealers, some bound for restful places on doctor's orders.

"Some of them are wage-earners, fellows who work in the shop," said the assistant manager of the Atlantic and Western Travel Agency's Manhattan office.

MORE ADVENTURESOME

"Many are becoming more adventuresome. Instead of the Catskills, they are going outside the country to Puerto Rico, Mexico, the Bahamas, especially young men and women.

"How do they pay? They pay cash. I'd say less than two per cent go on the installment plan, the 24-months pay deal."

Cotton-Wrecking Job

In an illustrated folder, the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation has shown starkly what the United States department of agriculture, under the New Frontier leadership, has done and hopes to do in wrecking this country's cotton industry.

In just two years, higher prices lost American cotton growers their market for more than two million bales of cotton. That is $20,000,000 less in potential farm income.

On top of that, the government wants to set up a "bread line" for farmers in which they will file by and take federal handouts for the difference between the world market price for cotton and this country's support price. What the farmers want is a lower support price, so American farmers can compete for the foreign markets, and, along with that, the right to produce more cotton so they will still be able to make a living without the handouts.

One pertinent question was: "Would you take a job as a salesman for a company that would allow you to sell only a limited amount of its products to make sure you didn't take any business away from other salesmen?" Another was: "If you were in the market for a new car, would you buy from a company that announced it was cutting down on the number of cars it produced, to make sure that its price stayed higher than the competitive models?"

Yet, the department of agriculture uses both of these poor business practices to administer our $22 billion cotton industry and then pretends to wonder why cotton is in trouble. Even with the surplus piling up, the department "brain-trust" isn't changing its approach.

The sales outlook for American cotton is even darker this year than before. Government economists are predicting that as much as a million bales of surplus cotton will be stored in government warehouse this year. That is $165 million worth of cotton in useless storage at a tremendous cost in storage charges.

It has been estimated that with a good acreage, farmers could raise cotton profitably at 25 cents a pound. At that price, this country could compete with such nations as Mexico and Egypt for world cotton markets. But the government insists on keeping the acreage low and the price up to around 33 cents a pound. This keeps down our production and turns away our markets, because the price is too high. The eventual effect, if this is continued, will be to eliminate all foreign purchases or to sell abroad at prices so low that foreign buyers will buy our cotton, manufacture goods and sell it in the United States at prices below what our domestic manufacturers must charge.

We have a foreign cotton market when our price is competitive. The world cotton market gets bigger each year and we used to enjoy most of this market but other countries are busy increasing their acreage as we cut down ours and are cashing in on the share of the market we had before our prices went up.

The Farm Bureau added: "Don't get us wrong—farmers want to get as good a price as they can for the crops they sell—but they want to sell them. And we've learned the hard way that it's not the selling price that counts—it's what's left over after the bills are paid."

When acres go down, production costs per pound of cotton go up. Farmers can buy a cotton picker to replace the field hands they can't afford to hire any more but a $15,000 cotton picker still costs $15,000 whether the farmer is picking 50 acres or 150. And nobody has been able to make a cotton picker do anything but pick cotton.

If anyone doesn't raise cotton and is wondering what all this has to do with him, the answer is, "plenty." In the first place, that is the citizen's tax money the brain-trusters are throwing around. In the second place, most people would rather have farmers raising cotton than looking around to see if they can get some of the jobs now held by other people. Finally, a $22 billion industry puts a lot of money into circulation and some of it reaches every citizen's pocket, directly or indirectly.

Here is the Farm Bureau cotton program:

1. Maintain 1963 cotton acreage at the 1962 level of 18.2 million acres, keeping the effective and successful release and reappportionment program for fuller realization of unwanted acreage. (The 1962 allotment is now 16 million acres.)

2. Reduce price supports to provide an effective selling price of 30 cents a pound, basis middling (150 a bale) and recapture markets lost due to non-competitive prices. (Present price support is about 33 cents, or $165 a bale.)

3. Reduce export subsidy from 8.5 cents a pound to 6 cents a pound to cut down government expenditures and relieve pressure on domestic mills. (Coupled with the lower price support, this would result in more exports sales at less cost to the taxpayer.)

Both Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana and Congressman Otis E. Passman of the fifth Louisiana district have said the cotton program could be put on a satisfactory basis under authority already granted by congress to the department of agriculture. Ellender said:

"It is my belief that the law we now have on the statute books could be made to work. . . I spoke to the secretary of agriculture in the hope that I could induce him to raise the amount of cotton acreage to some extent, say, probably a million acres—a million, one hundred thousand acres—but lower the price support so that the price of cotton can become more competitive.

Last October, Orville Freeman, secretary of agriculture, took what he said were steps to "solve" the surplus problem. He cut the 1963 acreage allotments by 12 per cent to the minimum allowed by law (16 million acres). He then asked for a new cotton program based on a compensatory (government handouts) payments scheme under which the treasury would pay the difference between what the USDA says cotton ought to sell for and the actual market price.

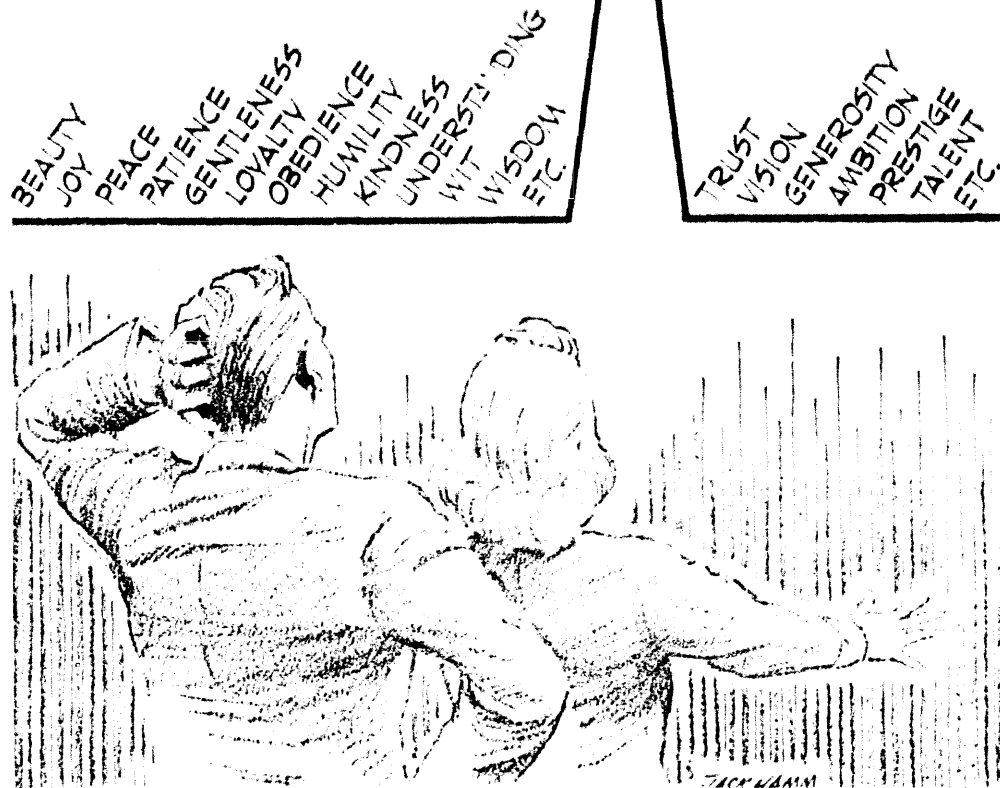

Cotton farmers don't want either of these "solutions." They don't want to get rid of rats in the barn by burning the barn down, they don't want to see their cotton problems "solved" by wrecking the cotton industry and they don't want to stand in a "bread line" waiting for government handouts.

Canada Elections Forced

National Controversy Over Introduction Of Nuclear Weapons Pushes Conservative Premier Out

Canadians go to the polls April 8 to elect a new parliament. The elections were forced in large part by a national controversy over the introduction of nuclear weapons to the nation to the north which led to a parliamentary rejection of Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker.

The Canadian government had for some time been exploring with the United States the possibility of adding a nuclear capability to two squadrons of BOMARC-B guided missiles now in place on Canadian soil. (A normal BOMARC-B squadron is 28 missiles.)

Also under discussion was addition of nuclear-tipped Genie and Falcon rockets to the equipment of the 66 F-101B "Voodoo" jet fighters Canada is buying from the United States.

None of these items are the so-called "strategic" weapons dealing out the thousands of deaths and vast areas of destruction the average man conceives of when nuclear weapons are mentioned. Rather they pack comparatively modest punches, even when nuclear-equipped, and are designed solely to knock manned aircraft out of the sky.

During a parliamentary debate in the Canadian House of Commons Jan. 28 Diefenbaker avoided stating definitely whether the three nuclear weapons would be added to the Canadian defense arsenal. He endeavored to place part of the responsibility for this absence of a final decision on the U.S. by hinting there had been problems in guaranteeing Canada its sovereign rights over the U.S.-controlled nuclear warheads.

It was at this point that the U.S. State Department entered the picture: in a statement reacting to the Diefenbaker speech State said flatly, "Joint control fully consistent with national sovereignty can be worked out to cover the use of such weapons by Canadian forces."

The department observed that BOMARC-B were not designed to carry a conventional warhead and declared that F-101Bs "without nuclear air defense warheads . . . operate at far less than their full potential effectiveness."

The BOMARC, which flies about three times the speed of sound, has a limited range—approximately 600 miles. During midflight it is guided by the SAGE system and uses a homing system toward the end of flight. Interestingly, in view of the State Department declaration, the Aerospace Industries Association says the BOMARC is designed to carry either conventional or nuclear warheads.

Since the missile is designed to bring down hostile aircraft, the advantages of a nuclear warhead for it are not immediately apparent.

Boy Is Stutterer

About Seven Out Of Thousand Children Have This Problem

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have an 11-year-old boy who for the past two years has been troubled with stuttering (stammering). It isn't too bad. He is only bothered by words like "Hello," "would," "please." He seems to hang on to the first syllable. Would guiding him to read to me from a book every day help? Can you tell me about stuttering? —Mrs. E.

Comment: About seven out of every thousand children have this problem. Incidentally, most doctors consider the terms synonymous (it doesn't make any difference if you say stuttering or stammering). By any name it brings unhappiness to the child and tensions within the home. Your patient understanding and helping him read from a book is commendable. However, there is more to the problem of stuttering than hoping to overcome it by simple measures.

I believe the thing to do is to have your family doctor recommend someone especially trained to cope with speech disorders. In that way he will be getting specialized attention which will enhance his chances for overcoming his stuttering.

I have been reading an extraordinary book recently published by Charles C. Thomas, Publishers, of Springfield, Ill. It is called "Voice and Speech Disorders: Medical Aspects," and edited by Nathaniel M. Levin, M. D., Clinical Associate Professor of Otolaryngology at the University of Miami School of Medicine at Coral Gables, Fla. I think it should be a part of every medical library, and available to all medical students and medical practitioners.

In it is a chapter written by Frank Robinson, Ph. D., titled, "Nature and Treatment of Stuttering in Children." Here doctors interested in speech disorders will find a comprehensive discussion of this stubborn problem.

Stuttering has been an enigma for centuries. Even Moses had to have someone speak for him because he was "slow of tongue." And we all know that Demosthenes put pebbles under his tongue to prevent stuttering. Modern treatment for stuttering has ranged from surgery to psychoanalysis.

According to Dr. Robinson, stuttering may appear at any age but is commonly first noticed between the ages of two and four. Sometimes its onset is abrupt, but more often gradual.

Until such time as you can find the professional help your child needs to correct his trouble, I suggest that you follow some of these practical steps that are outlined by Dr. Robinson and treated in detail: (Directly or indirectly, parents have much to do with a child's stuttering.)

"Allow child more time for talking." — "Keep parental concern from the child." — "Avoid labeling the speech." — "Search for disturbing experiences." — "Keep child in good general health." — "Ignore the child's liabilities; build up his assets."

So many parents have written me about this problem. Reading between the lines — and the lines themselves — you can almost feel the terrible home tensions in which the already overburdened child grows. Parents are anxious; the child is bewildered. Everybody wants to help but they ride off in many directions at once. As I said, the wise parents will seek professional help early.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "How to Stop Killing Yourself," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin for handling. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, in care of this newspaper.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U.S. Senator From Arizona

Idle production capacity in the United States is bothering President Kennedy. He gives this problem — plus unemployment — as the major reason why he believes the nation needs a whopping big tax cut and a whopping big spending program.

But I don't believe the President and his advisors understand the problem involved in the fact that the nation has large amounts of production capacity going unused.

It isn't enough merely to say that this capacity is unused because demand is lacking and that by increasing the purchasing power of the consumer the demand will increase.

Let's take an example. When the New Frontiersmen speak of unused plant capacity in the United States, the steel industry is most often cited as a case in point. Figures are produced to show that the steel industry is operating at only 60 per cent of capacity. Then it is argued that if the steel industry produced at 90 per cent of capacity the gross national product would increase and more people would be employed. The argument rests on a belief that if people had more money to spend they would spend a lot of it for products in which steel is used. This, in turn, would increase the demand for steel and bring about capacity or near-capacity production in American mills.

The trouble with this argument is that it overlooks the fact that steel-producing capacity is of many varieties, and some of that capacity is for a kind of steel that is no longer wanted. A large part of the 50 per cent unused steel-making capacity will never be used again no matter how much consumer purchasing power is expanded.

If things were as simple as President Kennedy and his economic advisors would like to make out, why was it that the steel industry spent a billion dollars last year to increase capacity? Why didn't the steelmakers merely use some of that 40 per cent of idle capacity the administration talks about?

The reason is easy to understand. An industry operating at only 60 per cent of its total capacity had to have a different kind of producing capacity. It needed a new capacity to produce a thin sheet steel so that it could compete better with the producers of other kinds of materials, such as plastics and aluminum. In short, it had to increase capacity for reasons of advancing technology and in recognition of the fact that a great deal of its existing, but unused, capacity wouldn't fill the bill.

If demand stemming from consumer purchasing power was the answer to unused capacity in the steel mills, it would be difficult to understand why 1962 wasn't a capacity year for steel. Just consider the automobile industry, perhaps the largest single user of American steel, and consider the fact that 1962 was one of the biggest years the automakers in this country have ever enjoyed.

General Motors, for example, made more money last year than any other corporation in any year in American history. Steel demand also was high in the fields of construction, highways, industrial plants, housing, schools and military hardware.

The need today is not for utilization of old and obsolete plant capacity, but for the building of new kinds of plant capacity. There is need, too, for greater capital investment, for more research and development and for more retraining of manpower for new tasks.

Our present problems are not the kind that lend themselves to easy answers, such as deficit spending combined with tax reductions.

How do you stand, sir?

Expense At Home

Deductions Allowed For Those Who Do Part Of Work There

If you're among the many salesmen, executives, other employees who must do work at home as part of your job, you are vitally affected by the specific guides the Treasury issued last year on deducting part of your home expenses as business expenses.

These new rules explain both the circumstances under which you can claim a deduction and how much of the cost of your office - at - home is deductible.

First, as an employee, you can't claim any deduction for office - at - home expenses unless your job requires you to provide your own space and facilities for doing some or all of your work and you do this work at home regularly. Voluntary, occasional or incidental use of your home as an office will not justify any deductions.

For instance, say you are a western sales representative for a New York firm which has no office in your territory and your job requires you to submit reports regularly. You are clearly required to provide your own space and facilities.

Preparing these reports in your home entitles you to deduct part of your home expenses as a business expense because you meet the two tests: "Your job requires you to furnish your own space and facilities, and you use your home regularly for this purpose."

On the other hand, say you are a sales manager who must submit a daily sales report. Ordinarily, you finish this in your employer's office, but occasionally you can't complete it before the office closes and everyone must leave, so you finish your report at home. You can't claim any home expenses, says the Treasury, because you use your home as an office only incidentally and occasionally instead of regularly.

Let's assume your job clearly requires you to use your home regularly for all or part of your work. Here's how to figure out how much of your over - all home expenses are deductible. You can deduct in full interest on your mortgage and real estate taxes; there's no problem here. You also can deduct a portion of your rent payment (if you rent the apartment or house), your electricity bills, gas bills, etc. You can deduct the cost of repairs, painting, etc., for the room you use as an office.

If you own your own home and paint the outside of the house or repair the roof, you can allocate part of this expense to the room you use as an office and deduct it. You can also allocate part of depreciation on your house as an expense and deduct it in part as a business expense because of the room you use as an office. You cannot, though, deduct any part of the cost of repairs made to a bedroom or other room used exclusively for personal reasons, or any part of what you spend for lawn care and landscaping, says the Treasury.

After you figure out which of your home expenses may be allocated in part to your office, your next step is to make the allocations. A space comparison is a common way to do this. For instance, if you use one room out of six or use 200 square feet of space out of 1,200 square feet, you can deduct one-sixth of the expenses. The Treasury permits you also to use any other reasonable method of allocation.

If you do your work at home in a den or other room which is suitable for personal use as well, the Treasury rules that you must cut your deductible office - at - home expenses to the ratio of time you use the room out of 24 hours. This is the tough part of the guides.

The above guides were issued by the Treasury to cover employees, but they would appear to apply equally to self-employed persons. As a dentist, physician, lawyer, other self-employed individual with an office or part-time office at home, you are also entitled to deduct a portion of your home expenses. In certain situations as a self-employed person, you might also be entitled to deduct part of your lawn and landscaping costs.

Tomorrow: Expense account records for 1963.

Our Diplomatic Blunders

While bending over backwards to be nice to the communist countries, the New Frontier administration has affronted practically every nation which has been friendly to us except Mexico. Now we are wondering when the errant state department will offend Mexico by putting some kind of squeeze on it.

Nations with which our relations are particularly strained include France, Canada, Portugal and Holland and we have also stepped hard on the toes of Great Britain and West Germany.

Our deliberate breach with Canada, in which President Kennedy apparently aimed at forcing out the conservative premier and bringing about the election of a socialist, is in line with the New Frontier's record of smashing conservative democratic governments and upholding communist and socialist governments to the extent of going to war, through the United Nations, against the democracies.

Historically Canada has been a friend of the United States, but now what will it be?

The Week In Focus

by Jack Gates

Along The New Frontier

It was another rough week for President Kennedy and his New Frontier, with thorny problems continuing to crop up in unexpected places, while solutions to many old ones continued to evade his best experts. As one put it, it is like a doctor trying to fight several different epidemics all at once.

THERE WAS no evidence that the split in the Western Alliance over the Common Market and the arming of NATO nations with U.S. nuclear weapons was healing. In fact, the rift seemed to be widening. As a result, the President held several top-level conferences the past week in an effort to seek a new route for the U.S. to follow. French President Charles de Gaulle, who touched off the controversy when he rejected England's entry into the CM, went his own way toward building a stronger Europe, composed only of continental nations, while in London, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and his party turned back a strong opposition assault to win a vote of confidence for his emergency economic program brought on by the CM debate. Among other things, Macmillan, who continues to blast de Gaulle, wants a government drive for world commodity agreements, a cutback of tariffs and freer trade generally. At week's end, President Kennedy offered the statement that if Europeans want U.S. Armed forces to leave Europe "we will do so."

MEANWHILE, another problem raised its head over a report that trade between the Soviet Union and Western Europe, especially West Germany, is expected to soar this year. At the same time the President couldn't deny a question that U.S. prestige abroad is lower. This was one of Kennedy's chief issues in his campaign for the presidency, accusing the Republicans of allowing U.S. prestige to drop. Now an old refrain has returned with haunting effects.

The President dropped a new program on Congress... the enthusiasm was anything but overwhelming. The plan—with the emphasis on youths—would expand the present overseas Peace Corps, set up in effect a national peace corps and establish a paid youth conservation corps along lines of the old CCC of depression days. The program would cost in excess of $100 million which would be added to a budget already reeling under pounding from overspending.

Opposition also continued to mount to the President's income tax cut and reform tax program, despite Mr. Kennedy's statement that the chances of a recession would be "substantially increased" unless his program was approved. Rep. John W. Brynes of Wisconsin charged to the president "you're proposing to give a bigger tax cut to the person who doesn't pay real estate taxes, who doesn't have major medical expenses, who doesn't contribute to his church or community chest." Meanwhile the National Association of Homebuilders, announced plans to fight the President's tax program, charging that the "homeowner and home buying public will receive the least net benefit" from the proposal. All this added up to a possible defeat for the program... or at least a complete rewrite job on it by Congress.

AT GENEVA, a deadlock continued in the disarmament talks. The latest Soviet proposal there was restatement of an old position with a Polaris twist. A constant Soviet demand in the long history of East-West negotiations has been that the U.S. give up its overseas military bases. This the U.S. has done in some instances with plans to give up others. But this didn't satisfy the Reds; the Soviets shifted gears to demand that the U.S. now liquidate nuclear deterrent forces on foreign lands and on oceans—which would mean an end to Polaris submarine and rocket bases abroad. At that, the U.S. was finding the going rough in attempting to secure Polaris bases in Spain and Italy.

EVEN THE UNITED NATIONS—the strongest supporter of which is the U.S.—took a slap at the President and his UN ambassador, A. J. Stevenson when it voted to go ahead with a controversial agricultural aid project for Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government despite vigorous objections from the U.S. U.S. officials say "not one dime" of our money will be used. But still the action was another slap at the U.S. by the UN, which could not have survived without U.S. backing.

THE SENATE also took a slap at the President when the Senate Majority Steering Committee voted 10-5 to reject a proposal to enlarge the Senate Finance Committee. Liberal senators had wanted the committee increased by two to add pro-administration Democrats. In deciding not to approve the measure, the senate probably avoided a likely party-splitting floor fight on the issue.

ANOTHER BLOW TO U.S. hopes to keep Laos in the West's column, or at least neutral was struck when the field commander of Prince Souvanna Phouma's neutralist forces was assassinated. Many believe the killing was instigated by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao.

All of this, coupled with the Cuban situation, has given the Republicans a feeling of hope that perhaps President Kennedy will not be unbeatable after all in the 1964 Presidential campaign. One thing is obvious—the President is definitely on the defensive 20 months before the election—which from a political view—is bad for the man in office.

The Cuban Tango

The Cuban problem continued to sweep along at tango speed the past week. Criticism continued to mount as more and more doubt crept in as to just what the Russians do have in Cuba.

ONE THING in it all was obvious—Premier Khrushchev of Russia has won a strategic victory in Cuba. The presence of even 17,000 Soviet troops and $100 million worth of modern equipment means the U.S. can't afford to invade Cuba without the type of provocation that Khrushchev is unlikely to give; that the Castro regime is propped up against internal revolt, and that Khrushchev has a base from which to continue plans for subversion of Latin America.

This developed at the same time that the Organization of American States was informed that international communism is plotting the overthrow of governments in Latin America, and that the campaign is being directed from Cuba. Even President Kennedy admitted that Cuba has been exporting "men and perhaps money" for subversive activities against other Latin American governments. A confidential report by special OAS security committees says Cuba is now a greater threat than it was last fall when the committee called it "a threat of the greatest gravity for the security of the hemisphere."

It was obvious in various ways the past week that the reign of Communist terror already has started. Communist hijacked a Venezuelan freighter near Puerto Rico which was en route to New Orleans. Riots have been staged by the Communist in Venezuela and other Latin American countries, and the tempo of these seems to have increased. Even more widespread disorders are expected, with a drive expected to be concentrated on Brazil.

MEANWHILE Senator Kenneth B. Keating, the constant critic of the Cuban policy, repeatedly charged that Soviet influence in Cuba is threatening the U.S. aid program to Latin America and triggering terrorism in the Western Hemisphere. Senator John Cooper of Kentucky called for resumption of the U.S. blockade of Cuba if diplomacy fails to get Russian troops off the island, while Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who has held several conferences with the Russian on this question reports very little progress if any.

Anyway you look at it, danger, hot danger, is ahead for the Western Hemisphere, and for Mr. Kennedy. As one put it, the Russians and his critics are baffling the President. He can't get the Russians out of Cuba and he can't get the critics to shut up about it.

Around The World Briefly

THREE WIDELY separate incidents happened the past week that was a little cheering for the U.S. The Red Chinese-Soviet Russian rift is still one with charges and counter-charges being hurled, although the Soviets held out a slender olive branch. To this, the Red Chinese said Russia would have to dump Yugoslavia as the price for a meeting to "talk things over" and said as far as it was concerned the rift was too great. AND IN BULGARIA African students—disillusioned with life under Communism clashed with Communist police on the main street of Sofia. Reports said 200 Africans from eight nations were involved. On the group's arrival in Vienna, some said the cause of the trouble was strictly racial. They said the communist referred to them as African "black monkeys." This will not aid the cause of Communism in Africa. IN THE MIDDLE EAST gunfire continued to crackle as the revolutionary forces that overthrew the government in Iraq wiped out Communist resistance. Premier Abdel Karim Kassam, who was shot by the rebels, had worked closely with the Communists. Apparently the new regime intends to get rid of them. This could signal a closer tie with the West.

IN ENGLAND, Harold Wilson, supposedly a close advocate of a "very close" relationship with the U.S. was elected head of the British Labor Party. However, it has been said he was opposed to the Nassau agreement between President Kennedy and Harold Macmillan. Regardless, the outlook is this—Wilson could be the next prime minister of Britain... and very soon.

IN THE UNITED STATES, a shock wave of Asian flu—or something very similar to it—is sweeping the eastern half of the nation and moving into the south and midwest. It caused widespread absenteeism among students and teachers and resulted in at least 700 deaths in four weeks. In the Monroe area, no outbreak has been reported... although types of flu and colds were widespread.

MEANWHILE, the fourth assassination plot reported against President Charles de Gaulle of France occurred Friday when six high-ranking army officers were arrested and accused of plotting to kill the tough old general. Despite our disagreement with the old Frenchman, he has reestablished stability in the French government—something it has lacked for many years. His disappearance from the scene could be bad for France.

WATCH FOR ANOTHER cold war "brush war" break-out soon. This could be between Malaya and Indonesia. Malaya, trying to form a federation, has ordered a quick military buildup. The federation is planned as a bulwark against communism in Southeast Asia. Indonesia has issued several threats, and there have been reports of a clash between the two nations already.

Interesting Facts Of Life

AN EXAMPLE OF THE waste in foreign aid is the case of the Swiss chalet. The U.S. was looking around Geneva for a larger home for its expanding mission and started bargaining for a particularly attractive chalet. After several months, the U.S. gave up. The price was simply too steep. Within a few weeks, India's mission in Geneva moved into the chalet. Foreign aid officials noted the deal was closed only days after India had signed a new foreign aid agreement with the U.S. for several hundred million dollars.

NOTE TO THE ACTIVE sports fan: If you've always thought that watching your favorite sport was a good way to relax, you're in for a jolt. Dr. Kenneth Rose, a medical researcher at the University of Nebraska reports that any football fan is as tensed up as the man on the field. Using an electrocardiograph tracing of a spectator at a game, Dr. Rose found that the fan went right along with the player as he ran, blocked, tackled. A pass interception, for example, made the spectator's heart jump from 75 beats per minute to 145.

THE GREAT granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln says she is opposed to "the aggression of the federal government in forcing integration on the South," particularly in the manner Attorney General Robert Kennedy is using. "This is a good time to reflect, and I think Abe Lincoln would do a lot of reflecting himself if he were here." The woman, Mrs. Mary Lincoln Beckwith, 64, made her statement about the time President Kennedy and his wife gave a social affair celebrating the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's Emancipation edict. The press was banned from the affair and no reason was given.

IN ROCHESTER the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People inaugurated another fight—this time they are trying to keep a group from building an "Aunt Jemima Pancake Kitchen." The group claims that the image of the Negro "mammy" was degrading to Negroes. It appears, as a Negro editor put it, that "certain groups within our race want to eliminate everything that was part of our heritage. I'm not ashamed of them myself."

THE UNITED STATES is a dangerous place to live—from an accident point of view. In 1962, accidents other than those involving automobiles cost 45,000 lives. This was an increase of three per cent over 1961. Another 6.3 million persons were injured in accidents that left them disabled. The toll in highway accidents in 1962 was around 41,000.

ANOTHER CONGRESSMAN, Representative Jim Wright of Texas, has lashed out at some of his colleagues. He says the overseas conduct of some congressmen has hurt American international relations. He named no names, but denounced "joy-riding congressional junkies" in general and promised to help put a stop to them.

Jet Stream Abnormal, Too

This has been an unusually cold winter worldwide—and in some areas the coldest weather on record has been noted. The cause? The amateur weather-guessers blame the icy winter on atomic bomb tests. But the scientific weathermen say no. They point out that even the biggest bomb explosion is small potatoes compared to the energy stirred up by weather: winter cyclones, for example, they say, eat up a 50-megaton bomb's worth of energy every few hours.

Their answer—the jet stream, that giant river of air sometimes moving as fast as 300 miles per hour eight miles above the surface of the earth is acting up. Weathermen say the jet streams this year did not follow the normal course, moving further north and pulling in tremendous amounts of cold polar air, then swinging further south than usual to dump it. In some places it was snow and the coldest weather ever; in others rains and floods.

Presumably as the days get longer and this hemisphere begins to warm, the jet streams will return to their normal courses, leaving the polar air where it belongs. But the past week, one U.S. weather bureau spokesman dropped a chilling thought. The whole world is generally beginning to get a little colder, he said, and this might be the frigid forebode of worse to come.

Nine Poles In Exile Dream Of Home

EDITOR'S NOTE — One works on the railroad, another draws a British pension, a third is an office clerk and others rent out rooms for a livelihood. They are nine elderly men in London who make up the quarter-century-old Polish Government in Exile. They're not officially recognized by any nation in the world, but they keep hoping that someday...

By PATRICK J. MASSEY

LONDON (AP) — Nine elderly exiles, dreaming of a thousand a year, miles away and a quarter-century ago, reign in London as the Polish Provisional Government in Exile. Unrecognized by world rulers, they cling to grand titles and eke out the pennies.

The formal apparatus of a powerful government that passed away 24 years ago is preserved complete with a president, a prime minister and a seven-man Cabinet.

This group claims to be the only legal successor of the administration that fled from Hitler's troops in 1939 and never returned to Poland.

As years slip by the pretenders never lose sight of their big dream—that one day communism will crumble and they will be called to rule a land which now lies virtually forgotten.

The exiles have their headquarters in a four-story Georgian mansion amid the fading grandeur of London's Delgravia section. Their leader is President August Zaleski, aristocratic, once wealthy and now nearing 80.

Zaleski talked about his aspirations during an interview in the rambling, high-ceilinged room that serves as his staff office.

There are 10 million free Poles throughout the world who look upon us as their leaders," he said.

Breaking down the figure, Zaleski admitted that it includes some six million Poles in the United States, a great majority of whom are now U.S. citizens who would not wish to return to Poland.

In Britain, Zaleski claims a following of some 150,000 Poles.

"We are financed entirely by contributions from free Poles—polled from the country 50 years throughout the world," he said.

"We do not get money from any foreign source."

These contributions add up to little more than $34,000 a year. After deducting expenses for the group's activities and upkeep of the headquarters mansion, little is left for salaries.

"My prime minister and I draw the same small remuneration, about $900 a year," Zaleski said. "The other ministers work without pay."

The prime minister is Antoni Jawlinski. His colleagues are obliged to combine their duties with earning a living in London.

Three of the ministers, including Foreign Minister Alexander Zawisza and Defense Minister Michal Karaszewicz, own houses and rent out rooms.

The minister of interior, Stanislaw Pomianowski, works on the railroad—"I think he is some kind of workman," Zaleski said vaguely.

Minister of Justice Stanislaw Lubodzieski is 84 and draws a British state pension. Minister of State Jerzy A. Gawenda is an official working hours, the ministers meet regularly with due pomp and ceremony. Each has an office and the fading grandeur of London's Delgravia section.

Their activities are now mostly confined to directing a stream of propaganda handouts at government and world organizations. They also organize weekly Polish language and literature classes for expatriate children.

The nearest Zaleski's government comes to establishing official relationships is on such occasions as during the 1952 congressional inquiry into the notorious Katyn Forest massacre in Poland. Zaleski's government was then in the United States, and he submitted evidence.

Zaleski became president of the exile regime in 1947 on the death of Wladyslaw Borokiewicz. He grew up in a Poland that was dominated by Russia and was first exiled from the country 50 years ago.

Glenn Still Has Eyes On Stars

MARINE COL. John Glenn, who made an epochal three-orbit trip around the earth a year ago, still has his eyes on the stars. The space hero says he'd like to venture again into space, to go to the moon. Glenn, now 41, is shown being interviewed by Howard Benedict of the Associated Press at the Manned Space Craft Center in Houston, Tex. On desk in Glenn's office is a model of a lunar landing vehicle. (AP Wirephoto)

EDITOR'S NOTE — A year ago Col. John H. Glenn Jr., thrilled Americans, as few others have in all history, with his epochal three-orbit trip around the earth. Here, in an exclusive interview, he tells of his hopes for a moon land, his life and times the past year and the philosophy he seeks to impart to modern youth.

By HOWARD BENEDICT

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A year after he thrilled the world by soaring three times around it, John H. Glenn Jr. still has his eyes on the stars.

"Sure," he'd like to venture again into space, to go to the moon.

He doesn't know whether he will make a trip to the moon. But he's confident that American space pilots will, after a lot of hard spadework has been done on the ground by thousands of persons working as a team.

As he sat in his office last week for a first anniversary discussion of his orbital trip, it was obvious he is looking to the future.

"My flight was a beginning, a stepping stone in space, to the moon, to the greatest exploration of all time," he said with the same boyish look which captivated millions who hailed his feat.

EVERY DETAIL.

Every detail of his pulsating flight is still fresh in Glenn's mind, as if he'd just stepped out of his Friendship 7 spacecraft onto the dock of the recovery ship Noa.

Who can forget those agonizing, prayerful moments at 9:47 a.m. on Feb. 20, 1962, when the great Atlas rocket unleashed a mighty shriek, a torrent of flame and shifted laboriously upwards from Cape Canaveral?

Then the sudden relief five minutes later when Mercury control center announced that John Glenn was in orbit?

For five hours much of the world seemed to stand still as it watched the astronauts moved here breathlessly followed the trail—blazing mission of the daring Marine.

Rarely had there been such an emotional American outburst. John Glenn had erased an underlying sense of national pessimism brought on by the cold war, Soviet space achievements, the feeling that the United States no longer was first in everything.

The new hero turned out to be as American as apple pie, a likable guy with poise, wit, intelligence and appealing, small-town charm. He was equally at ease discussing his flight with a fellow astronaut or with the President of the United States. He rekindled latent feelings of pride, patriotism and religion.

In the months that followed, Glenn was heaped with honors, named after him, received more than 100,000 letters, water-skied with Jackie Kennedy and became the idol of schoolboys and Walter Mitty's everywhere.

But John Glenn is still John Glenn.

"You can't change a man like that," commented one of his colleagues at the manned spacecraft center in Houston.

Has the flight made any marked change in his personal life or that of his family—wife Annie, David and Lynn?

"Because of all the publicity we received, almost everyone everywhere we go recognizes some member of the family. This can't help but make a little change in the way you do some things. But I think we've been pretty successful in keeping the family pretty much down to earth, conducting as normal a family life and activity as possible," Glenn replied.

When the Manned Spacecraft Center transferred its headquarters to Houston from Virginia last year, the astronauts moved here breathlessly followed the trail—

HERE IS A favorite pose of President Romulo Betancourt who has held his job longer than any elected leader in Venezuela's history. ## Betancourt In Crucial Year

By PAUL FINCH

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) —

President Romulo Betancourt, who has clung to his job longer than any elected leader in Venezuela's history, hopes next week to get President Kennedy's assurances that new U.S. oil restrictions won't scuttle his economic program.

Betancourt's decision to fly to Washington Monday apparently was prompted by alarm over Kennedy's announcement that U.S. oil imports will be based henceforth on the output of American producers rather than the demand of American consumers.

The onetime revolutionary said he will appeal to Kennedy not to slash imports of Venezuelan oil which account for much of the $1 billion the Caracas government collects in oil company taxes and royalties every year.

CRUCIAL YEAR

Betancourt, who will be 55 Feb. 22, makes his pilgrimage to Washington at the outset of his final and perhaps most crucial year in office.

In the four years he has served he has survived assassination attempts, Communist terrorism and revolts by extremists of all shades.

When Betancourt's decision to visit the United States became known, the Communists launched a new wave of violence obviously designed to give Washington the impression his government was not in control.

Since he took office in 1959, however, Betancourt has left little doubt as to who holds the reins. The bespectacled son of a grocer or neither looks nor sounds like a maker of history. Members of his own Democratic Action party say privately his voice is irritatingly shrill.

But Betancourt's colorful career indicates he may be remembered as the most outstanding Venezuelan since Simon Bolivar the Liberator.

EARLY DAYS

In his early days he was a classic example of the Latin American liberal struggling against military strongmen. Betancourt grew up under the reign of Juan Vicente Gomez, "the tyrant of the Andes," and in 1923 he was thrown in jail for four days for organizing a students' protest against the dictator.

In 1930 Betancourt fled to Costa Rica where he married a kindergarten teacher, Carmen Valverde. He was in the Communist party for a period.

When Gomez died in 1935 Betancourt returned to Venezuela, but the dictator's heir, Gen. Eleazar forced him back into exile.

The next strongman, Isaías Medina Angarita, allowed Betancourt to return in 1941 and permitted him to form the Democratic Action party. Four years later a group of young army officers overthrew the dictatorship and installed a provisional government with Betancourt at the head.

Betancourt's protege, novelist Romulo Gallegos, was elected president in 1948, but seven months later Col. Marcos Perez Jimenez took over at gunpoint and imposed an army dictatorship which lasted until he was toppled in 1958.

IN 1959

Taking over in 1959, Betancourt immediately instituted far-reaching economic programs including the so-called 50-50 plan under which half the profits of oil companies went to Venezuela. Later he upped the government's cut to 67 per cent and warned the companies they must serve national interests.

Berliners To Show Hate For The Wall

By JOHN O. KOEHLER

BERLIN (AP) — West Berliners will elect a new city government Monday—and show their hatred for the Berlin wall.

The wall means communism, and the Communists are one of the four political parties in the election. They are expected to get one of the worst defeats in Berlin's history.

The three other parties argue that votes against communism are more important than votes for any particular party.

"Every vote is a vote for freedom and against the wall," posters proclaim.

Mayor Willy Brandt and his Socialist party are expected to stay in power, but the question of that seems secondary to many voters.

A hotel porter put it this way: "Those Communists think they can use their wall to scare us into voting for them. They're mistaken. The wall is a red flag to Berliners, and it doesn't matter for whom we vote as long as we vote against the Communists."

The West Berliners already have given the Communists one thrashing at the polls. That was in 1958, a month after Soviet Premier Khrushchev made his first threat to get the Western Allies out of the city.

At that time, a record 92.8 per cent of eligible West Berlin voters went to the polls. The Communists got only 1.9 per cent of the total. The Socialists polled 52.6 per cent, the conservative Christian Democratic party 37.7, the liberal Free Democrats drew 4.5, and the Deutsche party 3.3.

Since then, the wall has been built.

Brandt is viewed generally as the man who has the complete confidence of the British, French and Americans, whose combined garrison of 12,500 men guards Berlin.

Brandt, unsuccessful candidate for chancellor in the 1961 West German general elections, first was elected mayor in 1957 to take the place of Otto Suhr, who died.

His Christian Democratic opponent, studious Franz Arnheim, has been serving as deputy mayor in a coalition since 1955. Top candidate for the Free Democrats is William Borm, 67. He was arrested in 1950 by East German police while driving to West Germany and spent nine years in Red prisons on political charges. Released in 1959, he became an active Free Democrat and was elected local party chief WICHITA (AP)—Wichita stunned Cincinnati's national champions 65-64 Saturday night, ending the Bearcats' 37-game winning streak. As Dave Stallworth threw in 46 points, Stallworth scored the last seven points in the final 4 minutes.

Cincinnati led 64-58 with 4 minutes to go when the Wheelshockers started their amazing rally. Stallworth got the last three points on free throws. He made one of two fouls for a 64-63 reading with 1:32 left.

Cincinnati then went down the court, missed a shot, and Wichita got the rebound. Gene Smith, a Cincy sophomore, then fouled Stallworth and he made both free throws for the final 65-64 Wichita edge with 74 seconds left.

The Bearcats missed another shot with 32 seconds left. Wichita took the rebound and stalled out the victory. An overflow crowd of 10,693 whooped it up for Wichita.

It was Cincinnati's first defeat since Jan. 10, 1962, when Bradley upset them in overtime at Peoria, 70-68.

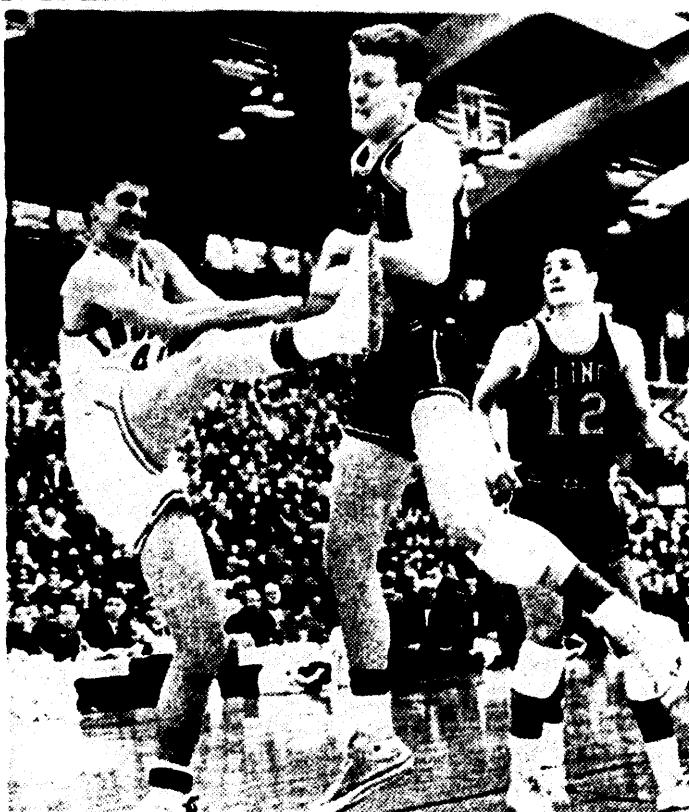

Loyola of Chicago, ranked second nationally and another unbeaten, was also upset Saturday night by Bowling Green.

Cincinnati, shooting for an unprecedented third straight NCAA championship, seemed to have it wrapped up with the six-point lead with 4 minutes left. But their errors and Wichita steals turned the tide.

USL 2nd, Tribe Wins Mile Relay

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—Louisiana State University spurred from behind Saturday night to win the first Southeastern Conference indoor track meet by two points over the University of Alabama.

The two mile run, with graceful, Florida State won the independence strides, Robinson finished college competition with the 20 laps in 9:30.9.

The first three finals in the competition which began early in high school division produced records and ended 12 hours.

Alabama had the competition at McGill Institute at Mobile, sewed up until the last two events, pole vaulted 13 ft., 2 1/2 inches for thanks to senior Chuck Moseley a new record by half a foot. The who smashed two records and 5-6 competitor used a fiber glass won three events.

The dazzling one-man show in speed and agility captivated the crowd of 6,000.

Moseley set new marks in the final time of 4:33.9—clipping 2.4 60-yard high hurdles and the broad jump. He also triumphed in the low hurdles.

Moseley ran the highs in 7.3—breaking the 7.4 record set last year by Don Styron of Northeast Louisiana State. The Alabama speedster broke his own broad jump record of 23 feet, 8 inches with a leap of 24 feet, 1 inch.

He won the low hurdles in 6.9 seconds, just two-tenths of a second off the Coliseum record.

Twenty-two colleges, including 11 of the 12 SEC track teams, and 60 high schools from throughout the South were entered. More than 1,300 athletes participated in the meet.

The competition was divided into four categories—SEC, independent colleges, college freshmen and high schools.

Malcolm Robinson of Southwest Louisiana was fourth.

Indian track mentor Bob Groseclose said after the meet that he was well pleased with the job done by his freshmen.

In addition to Dalton LeBlanc's effort, Irish Gayland LeBlanc took in the 880 and first year man Bob Stratton was second in the high jump. Gayland LeBlanc turned in a 53.6 in the half mile and Stratton cleared six feet in the high jump.

Groseclose said he felt Pennel's ankle had not healed sufficiently for an all-out effort. Pennel, who sprained his ankle on his first jump in the Milrose Games in Madison Square Gardens two weeks ago, was operating at about three - fourths speed, Groseclose said.

In other races Stratton finished fourth in the broad jump and Jay Goldsmith was fourth in the 60-yard dash.

Hayes Sets Mark In 70-Yard Dash

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Bob Hayes of Florida A&M, running by coming back in the finals in on the boards for the first time the same blistering :06.9 to de- in his life in the Mason-Dixon feat Scott Tyler and Roosevelt games Saturday night, broke the Smith easily.

A few minutes later, Detroit school teacher Hayes Jones, rolled to an unprecedented 41st consecutive indoor hurdle victory in winning the 70-yard hurdles over Ralph Boston by a good five yards in :08.1.

Jones had won at San Francisco Friday night to equal the consecutive victory mark established by Harrison Dillard, of Baldwin-Wallace.

His victory string never was in doubt Saturday night, as he rolled out of the blocks on top and had his field whipped after two hurdles.

Two members of the female contingent from Europe, Jutte Heine of Germany and Teresa Cieplak of Poland, were upset in their events.

The Polish girl, European hurdles champion, after equalling the world indoor mark of :09.2 held by Jo Ann Terry in a heat of the 70-yard hurdles, was nipped at the tape in the finals by a Kansas high school girl, Janelle Smith, of Fredonia, in :09.4.

The statuesque Miss Heine, who had equaled Wilma Rudolph's world indoor mark of :07.8 in the 70-yard dash qualifying, started poorly in the finals and wound up third behind Edith McGuire of Tennessee State and Willie White of Chicago in a three-way judges decision. Miss McGuire also had turned in an :07.8 in her heat to equal the existing indoor mark.

Left-handed pole-vaulter Perry Pratt of Texas Southern won his event at 15'7" with fewer misses than Henry Wadsworth of the U. S. Army and Mel Hein of Southern California at the same height.

Loyola Falls To Bowling Green Cagers, 92-75

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP)—Bowling Green's resurgent Falcons, hitting more than 54 percent of their shots, toppled second-ranked Loyola of Chicago from the ranks of collegiate basketball unbeaten Saturday night, 92-75.

The victory was the sixth straight for Bowling Green, 14-6 while Loyola suffered its first setback in 22 outings.

Moving into a 9-0 lead at the beginning, the Falcons never trailed and held leads ranging from 11 to 17 points.

Loyola, one of the nation's highest scoring teams, was cold on the floor, cashing in on only 41 percent of its goal tries.

Howard Komives led the Falcons with 32 points while big Nate Thurmond, the Beegoes' 6-foot-11 center, added 24. Leslie Hunter scored 24 for the losers and Jerry Harkness added 21.

Loyola's 75-point total was the team's second lowest of the year. Earlier this year, Loyola squeaked past Dayton, 74-69.

Marion Wins Hoop Tourney

SPEARSVILLE (Special)—Marion defeated Farmerville 51-34 in the boys finals of the Undergraduate Tournament here Saturday. Reagan scored 15 for the winners.

January May Turn Meet Into Runaway

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Don January, the solid man from Texas, threatened to make a runaway of the $25,000 Tucson Open golf tournament Saturday as he pushed his lead after 54 holes to a fat and comfortable seven strokes.

January, who hasn't won a tournament in nearly two years, shot a three-under-par 69—his third consecutive round in the 60s—to post a score of 201 at the three-quarter mark.

Closest to him were former National Open champion Gene Littler and young Frank Boynton, of Corpus Christi, Tex., each with 208. Rex Baxter, another Texan, had a 209.

January now has put together rounds of 65-67-69 and is 15 under par for the distance, over the 49er's Country Club course.

He had nines of 35-34 Saturday.

West Virginia Tops Richmond By 89-72 Count

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI)—West Virginia handed Richmond its seventh consecutive Southern Conference defeat Saturday night, 89-72, with all five Mountaineer starters hitting in the double figures.

The win allowed West Virginia to clinch the mythical regular season conference title, but the league champion will be determined in tournament play here Feb. 28-March 20.

The loss shattered Richmond's hope of immediately winning a berth in the conference tournament. The last-place team in regular season play is ineligible for tournament play and the Spiders must either win one of its next two league games or its last-place Citadel must lose its final game next Saturday against Davidson for the Spiders to compete.

COMIN' UP AFIELD

Turkey Hens
Make History

With Sam Hanna

Trapping Is Hard

It was cold Friday morning back there on a palmetto ridge in Lafourche Swamp when three wild turkeys broke suddenly from their captors' grip, disappearing into the swamp.

They gathered speed as they topped the tree tops, then flew out of sight over the big oaks with thick underbrush beneath.

Quickly the ceremony was over, but it climaxed several weeks of work for a handful of game management personnel, marking the first turkey release in Ouachita Parish.

The three hens were trapped in a nearby turkey country for release on the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area — the 15,000-acre turkey family struts by. They are brought by the Louisiana Wildlife & Fisheries Commission.

As far back as biologist Cliff Williams could recall, the release of the wild turkeys in Lafourche was one of the best times that turkeys have actually been trapped in Louisiana, then released for the purpose of starting a turkey population in an area that did not have turkeys.

This is a tough project in that turkeys are not easily trapped, especially in areas where woods bugs can uproot a trap easier than a biologist can make one.

Cliff, joined by biologist Jerry Williams and area supervisor Jack Rushing, hunted the turkeys about two miles back into the Russell Sage area, making the first release in ideal habitat for the keys.

When the trapping had been completed, Cliff hopes to release about 15 turkeys in Russell Sage, mixing up gobblers with hens so that the reproduction can begin. One hen will reproduce about 15 small ones.

Deer Are Hungry

According to reliable sources, deer in some areas of Terrebonne and Iberville parishes are slowly starving due to the unusually dry but cold winter.

Several persons who watch the deer population closely in Terrebonne told us this week that the deer are starving to death. Some deer have been found dead already while a major die-off is feared.

It's been an unusually dry year with a shortage of mast in the Delta. For these major reasons deer in some spots of the Delta were runty during the hunting season.

Now the season is over, but it's still winter and the deer are still having a hard time finding something to eat.

Latest On Waterfowl

Although the season has been over since Christmas Eve, Louisiana still had almost a million ducks when the last survey was made, which was January 23 through February 9.

This shows that about a million ducks left our state in January, since the survey before the last one showed almost four million.

Southwest Louisiana, of course, had the largest concentration with slightly over two million.

But the report brought out some interesting points for hunters in this area.

For instance, a substantial increase of blue-winged teal was noted in the marsh country, water levels have remained ideal on Catapouche Lake in our area, and high numbers of mallards were found in the brakes and sloughs of North-east Louisiana.

Why can't we have a December to January duck season? While the waterfowl survey was

Little Man's Corner

It snowed on Monday, but was sunny on Tuesday and the little men made news afield.

The Old Regulars are catching fish at Black Bayou, including bass, but it's the real fishermen who are having the luck. For instance, Sam LaDart, fishing with a blue worm, has been catching bass.

Mrs. Ladart went out for the first time in about two years and caught some white perch.

The white perch fishermen are using spinners.

And two other local fishermen, Jack Ray and Dick Pontieux, landed quite a string of bass at Cheniere. They caught 11 bass that weighed 34½ pounds.

Jack Ray landed two the day it snowed. He is fishing with a H&H, switching colors from yellow to black and white.

So far there haven't been any reports of bream catches and biologist Jim Davis says it'll be around April 1st before the bream really begin to bite.

Bass fishing is still spotty, but while perch are biting just about everywhere.

Around the Lake Providence area, George Wyse and T. J. Shout caught a nice string of white perch at Old River, Alvie Lambert and Sam Foutz mixed white perch with bass at Concordia.

Still from Lake Providence, Mrs. Collie Mangham and Mrs. Lula Townsend caught white perch at Old River.

Meantime, the quail season continued to attract attention, especially from Winnboro where they are probably more bird hunters per capita than any other town in the area.

Fellows like Johnny Balance, Buck Hollis, Fred Nielsen and Sonny Woods say they can't find quail, but you just try to give these bird hunters on any given Louisiana's turkey population made a comeback in the Delta parishes following a restocking program several years ago. It was successful because the habitat was there and the people supported it.

Turkeys will survive in Russell Sage if the people support the program — if the squirrel hunters, rabbit hunters and deer hunters on the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area will power when the first of the turkey family struts by. They are brought by the Louisiana Wildlife & Fisheries Commission.

Once protected, they'll grow into a handsome turkey population on a public area where all hunters can get a chance to kill a big gobbler in the not too distant future. Turkeys released in Ouachita will spread out into Richland and Morehouse.

A turkey restocking program is a much more difficult undertaking than deer restocking, because turkeys are more costly than deer. They prefer high ground with underbrush and openings too where hunters are plentiful.

And a turkey restocking program must be conducted on public land, like Russell Sage, so that the program will benefit the public and not the private property owner.

It was cold Friday morning on that dry ridge in Lafourche where Cliff and Jack held the little hens while Jerry banded them — the first wild turkeys in Ouachita since around since 1910. Quick as a flash the birds disappeared into the swamp.

A WILD TURKEY is banded before released in the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area in Lafourche Swamp near Monroe. Releasing the hen (left to right) biologist Cliff Williams, area supervisor Jack Rushing and biologist Jerry Farrar, all of the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission. They released three hens Friday with plans to release about 12 more — wild turkeys trapped in a nearby area. This is the first turkey release in the history of Ouachita Parish. DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Art Heyman set a record first half pace with 18 points and wound up with 26 as third-ranked Duke defeated Wake Forest 73-60 Saturday night and clinched the Atlantic Coast Conference's regular season basketball championship.

An overflow crowd of 9,000 saw Duke post its 13th consecutive victory in defeating the Demon Deacons for the third time this season. One game did not count in the ACC standings. The Blue Devils are 12-0 in the ACC and 19-2 overall. Wake Forest is 10-3 and 13-7.

Heyman dazzled the home crowd in the first half as Duke built up a 10-point lead, 25-15, after 10½ minutes. Wake Forest narrowed the margin to four points three times before the half. Duke led at intermission 43-35.

LAFAYETTE (Special) — USL's draws is pacing the USL attack stumbling Bulldogs will attempt to with an average of 13 per game, break a tripping three-game skid Monday when they in almost 44 per cent of his floor game upstate Natchitoches to Joe Smith and he has a 75 per cent mark with ways tough Northwest State in a Gulf States Conference tie.

This will mark the second straight match of the campaign between these arch rivals, and it is slated for 7:30 p.m. at the gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. Southwestern notched a close 82-75 decision over NSC at Black College here two weeks ago, and that triumph was the last to be recorded by the Bulldogs. At that time it gave USL a perfect 5-0 tally against GSC opposition.

The tide then turned on coach Beryl Shipley's cinderella quintet as three consecutive defeats have been inflicted. After dropping a 70-61 non-league tilt to Louisiana College, USL suffered two GSC reversals to McNeese State, 47-46, and Northeast La. State, 82-71. This places Southwestern at 11-11 for the winter.

USL, owning a 5-2 record, now clings to a razor-thin lead in the GSC chart. McNeese is runner-up at 6-3 and closes out the '63 schedule Monday against Louisiana Tech at Ruston. Northeast is a close third with a 5-3 effort, and faces Southeastern Louisiana, the same night in Hammond.

Many Holes-In-One
Shot In '62 Meets

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen players shot holes-in-one during the 1962 professional golf tour. One golfer got $50,000 for the feat, another didn't even get his on the scorecard.

One out of every four tournaments finished in a tie. Bob Goalby and Johnny Pott each finished second four times. These were some of the gleamings from the record 1962 golf tour, with 48 official and two unofficial tournaments and more than $2 million in prize money, compiled by the Professional Golf magazine.

Dick Mayer, former U.S. Open champion, was the man who got years, four months and 27 days $50,000 for an ace, at the Palm Alt when he won the U.S. Open. He won two other tournaments last year.

John Reudi had his ace in the Sahara Invitational along with an opening 63, but a rainstorm drive washed it out. The oddity was that the storm hit one of the two and Houston LaClair, had success, but didn't touch the one eagle, and two others, Sam Carmichael and Red Wiley, hit double eagles.

No player got two aces, but three took 11's on one hole. Bill Collins, Jimmy Demaret and Billy Dunk.

Arnold Palmer won the most money, more than $82,000, and the most tournaments, seven.

The low nine hole score was 28 by Tony Lama in the Seattle Open. Buddy Sullivan had the low Open. George Bayer trailed by two, 18, a 61, and tied with Billy Casper, shot a final round 63, and per for the low 36 with 130, Sullivan by one shot to Billy Casper van at Tucson, Casper at Seattle, in the Indianapolis Classic.

Casper won four tournaments, second to Palmer's total. Casper land had the toughest break. The Bulldogs were hot in the opening seconds of the second half and built a quick 34-25 lead behind John Matthews, Jimmy Edmonds and Rado.

Edmonds scored a free throw to make it 34-26 and Kessinger added three points to make it 36-21 before Georgia began to pull away.

With 13:30 left, Georgia had a 46-35 lead and maintained this was 21-16 in favor of the Rebels, comfortable margin of 3 to 12 Mississippi had gained the lead points throughout the remainder of the game.

Rally In Korea Not Interfered With By Junta

SEOUL, Korea (UPI) — South Korea's new civilian opposition party Saturday held its first public rally without interference from the ruling military junta.

More than 10,000 persons heard civilian politicians bid for votes in the national elections scheduled for later this year by criticizing the junta for high prices and economic stagnation in its nearly two years of rule.

Last week, a scheduled rally by the new civil rule party was banned by junta officials.

Only a half a dozen policemen, armed with clubs but not guns, were in evidence at the rally. The crowd was orderly, cheering the speakers occasionally as their words boomed out over a public address system.

There were reports, meanwhile, of a power struggle in the ranks of the junta, many of whose members will seek civilian posts in the elections.

The regime's No. 2 man, retired Brig. Gen. Kim Chong Pil, denied a report that he planned to resign as chairman of the junta party, which is favored to win the elections under junta chief Gen. Park Chung Hee.

Park was reported to have decided to run for president, but Kim denied reports he would bow out of the political scene because other junta members feel he is too powerful.

The junta party is filled with the associates Kim brought with him when he stepped down as secret police chief, and his opposition within the ruling group fears this would enable him to extend his control over the nation.

All-German Tank Is Demonstrated

Mardi Gras season is almost with us again. Balls have been underway in New Orleans for weeks past, and our people, journeying to the Crescent City in ever-increasing numbers, will continue to do so until the close of festivities some ten days hence.

A favorite party in Monroe at this time is the "Fasching" small candle. Our popular BENTON WAKE, held annually at the home of ANNELIES and ED HAY, evening parties this week, before WARD, JR. Each year with his departure this weekend for tions set a theme which is carried out in decorations and costumes worn by guests. For this home is found for the family party, "Distress Bottle," with there Last Friday evening, PAT notes enclosed such as are tossed and BILL RILEY, JR. were hosts into the sea by marooned sea at a cocktail buffet for the Wake- men were mailed to bid guests to fields. All yellow flowers were an "Under the Sea" affair.

Arrivals last Saturday evening found the Hayward home converted into an undersea domain, with blue-shaded lights, fishnet caught with coral and seashells, and Japanese fish bowls. Covering the picture window was an undersea mural, with a view of the moonlit bayon visible through a "porthole." An array of finger food was served from a buffet table covered with green and coral with candles in bottles.

Guests came in assorted seasonally attire, including such original set-ups as BOOTS and FRED CLIPPER, PER, JR. as a pair of octopus, ANN and FLOYD STONE, JR. as shrimp in the mud, and ROSE MARY BRISIN as a sailor with husband DARRYL in elegant yachtman apparel.

Prize-winners were BETTY and HARRY STONE, and R. G. HART MARY HART was for her elegant sailor suit to disaster.

Miss host was Neelene with Angeline as his handmaid. Shoppers, cutting were DOT and JIM WILLIAMS, who arrived in the art of undress, expected when one is caught in an emergency, whatever is closest, and comes up with a bit belt and one water ski.

Prize-winners for costumes were the BOB HANNAS. Martha wore a black slicker fisherman outfit and came dragging her "catch," Bob as a mermaid in blonde wig and tailfin, skirt sewn with fish scales.

Bayou DeSard country clubs Mardi Gras ball, traditionally the most gala event on the year's calendar, is scheduled for this coming Saturday night, February 23, at 9 o'clock. JEAN DIXON and her committee are hard at work on plans for the formal affair. King JAMES SPARKS, club president, will rule over the festivities with a queen whose identity will remain undisclosed until time for her coronation. Billy Williams' orchestra will play for dancing.

Visitors from out of town are welcomed to Monroe with parties, informal and always fun. Here is the guest of the LARRY SHIPMAN is Ruth's mother, MRS. E. C. DREWS, of Plymouth, Michigan. On Monday afternoon, GENNY COLLET invited a group in for dessert and a visit with Clara. A Valentine's theme was carried out in the use of a centerpiece of red geraniums and cherry dessert. Twelve attended.

On Tuesday, Ruth and Clara entertained with luncheon at the Rendezvous. White candles flanked the centerpiece of red carnations and white chrysanthemums.

Valentines marked places for fourteen guests.

Last Sunday evening, CHIN KY LEMPERT was hostess at dinner, honoring the JOHN GAINES of Bowling Green, Kentucky. She was the former Mabel Sharp Davenport of Mer Rouge. The Gaines were guests of LETTIE and JOE DAVENPORT in Mer Rouge en route to a meeting in New Orleans. Spring flowers centered the table where guests were seated. The menu included turkey, asparagus with almonds, green rice, frozen fruit salad and a lemon mold dessert. Those invited to share this party with the Gaines included BETTY and PRENTICE GRAY, their son EASTLAND, the JACK CAMPBELLS, and DAISY GRAY.

In Dallas this weekend are KAK and AMOS SHELTON, JEANNE and A. B. MYATT, BETTY and JIMMY MOORE. They are visiting former Monrovyans GAY and GORDON MCLENDON, DOT TIE and ED WICKER. Last evening the McLendons were hosts at a dinner honoring the Myatt's twentieth and the Wicker's nineteenth wedding anniversaries. The group are to go on to the McLendon ranch today, and come home early next week.

GLADYS DICKERSON did herself proud with decorations for the DAR George Washington birthday luncheon at Bayou DeSard country club last Saturday. In lieu of red carnations, usually available in such profusion at this time, Gladys used small red scrolls, each inscribed with date and year of an interesting event in our country's history which took place in February. These small scrolls were placed on a wide blue ribbon which stretched the length of the white-covered tables. Each table was centered with an inverted brandy snifter covering an arrangement of red carnations and violets. On the speaker's table, three tiered snifters held carnations, a figure of Washington, and a

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Love Theme Portrayed

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

La Petite Maison Garden Club presented a very colorful and artistic program for the Valentine's Day celebration last Wednesday. Commemorating the occasion of "Valentine Day," each of the five designs brought in by the members and their president, Mrs. M. C. Thompson Jr., interpreted the love theme which prevailed on the day of all days for the heart.

The first design was made by Mrs. Thompson, who chose as her theme for the still life motif, "Love." An antique picture frame, which had been sprayed white, then light gray with gold served as a frame for a lovely white ceramic cherub. The cherub was placed on a red velvet background within a heart outlined with red velvet ribbon and lace.

Red ribbon flowing from the cherub's hand led to an engagement ring in a small box that was placed beside the picture for someone "Special."

This was complimented by an old-fashioned nosegay of red and white flowers. The entire arrangement was placed on a red velvet base, slightly embossed. This design would be ideal for the buffet decorations for the Anniversary Tea.

SNAPDRAGONS

Mrs. Louis Breard Jr. made an asymmetrical design using white snapdragons for the main line in a lovely white ceramic container. When this line he placed red roses with the hand to form a heart shape. The roses were massed near the center to form the focal area and create good balance in the design. Variegated as pedistra foliage formed a background for the roses and two leaves were placed low in the design to complete the triangle. Two hearts made of white and red pipe cleaners were placed near the central area of the design — thus completing the picture. It was a perfect interpretation of "Love" and would be ideal for the living room table for that holiday party.

An asymmetrical design was chosen by Mrs. C. Henry Wells. She chose a large, pink, variegated glass for the main line in a white ceramic container. Baby's breath and foliage of the gladiolus formed the filler material. A small white cupid figure made of ceramic was placed near the center of the design, accented by clusters of white fragrant hydrangeas and blue violets giving the nostalgic feeling so important in the Valentine motif. This design would be ideal for the hall table, setting the pace for the Valentine Party.

CERAMIC CHERUB

Two of the club's members, Mrs. Doyle Hamilton and Mrs. J. B. Gaiennie, used an impressive container, a porcelainized ceramic cherub, white in color, holding the ceramic heart for the flowers. The design was a triangle made of white snapdragons formed the central focal area and main flowers. For filler the foliage of the snapdragons, which is artistically curly, was used throughout. Baby's breath was used low in the design and followed the lower line of the white snapdragons. This design so interpreted of love, would be ideal for any place in the home for the Valentine theme.

EXTENSION NEWS

Gardening Hampered

By AUDREY DAWSON

Those of us who like to garden are wondering if we are going to get any weather for planting in this early spring of 1963. Yours truly has so many plans, but as yet they are still on paper. Weather was just not right for work in the garden. Surely this kind of weather cannot continue until right up to summer.

So, perhaps in a few days we can visit our nursery and select some of the plants to add to the landscape. If roses happen to be one of your favorites and who doesn't like roses? Even though they do demand care and many times prove to be expensive, most of us have to plant a few. The two American selections for 1963 are Royal Huddess and Tropicana. Royal Huddess is a hybrid tea admired for its beautifully formed, soft-pink, fragrant flowers and excellent form in bud and flower. Tropicana is an orange-red hybrid tea. The bush gets tall, and most blooms are supported by long stems. There are ever so many new roses this year so if you are interested, be sure to visit your nurseryman and make your selection so that when the weather permits they can be planted.

The lengthened jacket made news in suits for this spring. Though short jackets remain there are many varieties of the longer jacket. They can be fitted, semi-fitted, or casually loose and go to any lengths from wrist to tunic.

The skinny look in suits is the long jacket, sleeves slim set into a natural shoulder. Necklines are collarless or have narrow revers.

Belts are important on many length jackets. Many are worn very high or just above or below the waistline.

Skirts take their cue from the jacket worn over them. Slim and narrow for the classic spore and time length skirts.

Suits this spring have great feminine appeal and confidently take their rightful place in the overall picture.

FOR HOMEMAKER

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, have been having trouble with skidding scatter rugs, you will be pleased to learn about the new backing called curon for rugs. It is permanently heat laminated to the backs of rugs, thus providing an anchor to hold them in position on floor surfaces even through vacuuming. Curon can be machine washed.

You, Mrs. Homemaker, who likes to sew, will be interested in three new products in this area. The first a tracing wheel for pattern making which features rounded points to protect your pattern and fabric. The second item is packaged sewing machine needles with three needle sizes in each package.

The third item is snap fasteners and hook and eye tape. Both tapes are packaged in 18 inch lengths and are available in pink and white.

The new dye it yourself instant shoe coloring is available in 18 fashion colors. This product is suggested for use on leather. Claims say it won't streak, smudge, peel, crack or be rubbed away.

A new infant feeding aid has been introduced. The new feeding method incorporates a pre-sterilized, tough, pliable, disposable inner bottle. When it is inserted in a bottle holder a constant controlled flow of air free formula is provided to the infant.

Stamp News

Reins of Israel are featured on the fourth annual series from that small nation, issued by the Israel Philatelic Association in America. The low cost denomination depicts the Babara Bushard, a large eagle bird which lives on the dry open plains. The Scops owl, which exists in the hollows of trees, is shown on the post value. The Purple Heron, a long-legged bird which also is abundant in Florida, is illustrated on the highest value. Miriam Katoly of Haifa was the designer for the three new multicolored stamps.

Speaking of birds, the bald eagle, the symbol of American freedom illustrated on the new 4-cent postmarked annual postage card is declining in popularity. This has been the cause of great concern not only to the National Audubon Society, but also to the U.S. government itself. That is why the bald eagle appears on the annual postage card as part of a campaign to publicize the dwindling of the famed eagle. Today, federal law provides a maximum penalty of $500 or six months imprisonment for killing or molesting bald eagles. Florida and Alaska are the only states in which the bald eagle now survives in sizable numbers.

Belgium has issued a 1 franc plus 50 centimes stamp honoring the millenary of the city of Ypres. The design features the Menin Gate at Ypres, which is inscribed "To the Armies of the British Empire who stood here from 1914 to 1918."

The American Topical Association has issued a new handbook entitled "How to collect Topical Stamps" written by its president John H. Groat. This book will prove of benefit to collectors who are beginning their topical collections or advanced disciples. A copy of the book, which costs 50 cents, may be obtained by writing American Topical Association, 3330 N. 50th St., Milwaukee 16, Wis.

A personal labor of love in the stamp field is noted in the issuance of the Citation Stamp Album by H. E. Harris & Co. It was prepared and edited by Henry E. Harris, who claims that this book has more illustrations than any other album in the entire world. It provides space for over 60,000 stamps. Harris says that his primary purpose in producing the album is to help stimulate the growth of the stamp hobby throughout the United States and that he is not looking for any financial gain. He has established a retail price of $14.95 prepaid. Orders can be sent directly to H. E. Harris & Co., Box A, Boston 17, Mass.

This album is recommended for beginners and veteran stamp collectors alike.

The use of photography in the realm of art has shown some ingenious applications in recent years. The most recent example is a current publishing undertaking whereby famous art masterpieces are reproduced in 35mm color slides which are enclosed in a book explaining a specific school of art.

The combination of authoritative book text, color slides and a hand viewer makes it easy for anybody, anywhere, to see, learn about and enjoy fine art in his own home at his convenience.

TWO VOLUMES

At hand are the first two volumes in a series of 18 titles which will be published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., New York, called "The Color Slide Book of the World's Art" ($8.95 each). The first one deals with "Impressionist Painting" and the second with "Dutch Painting, 17th Century." Very shortly, "Italian Painting of the High Renaissance" and "Early Flemish Painting" will be issued and other schools of art and other periods are presently in preparation.

Each book contains 24 color slides and a collapsible cardboard hand viewer. The slides are protected by a double cardboard cover, half of them in front and the other 12 in the back of the book. Each one fits into a transparent pocket and has the name of the artist and its title imprinted, as well as the museum in which the original painting hangs.

The text in each volume has been written by an art authority and is illustrated with black-and-white reproductions. This is followed by a commentary and description of each of the 24 color slides, including its original dimensions. Thus, by projecting the slides in a normal 35mm slide projector, many of the paintings can be reproduced in their actual size... if the screen is large enough.

Emil R. Meijer, director of the educational services of the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam, Holland, is the authority who discusses the Dutch paintings of the 17th Century. And among the artists whose masterpieces are reproduced in color slides are: Rembrandt, Frans Hals, Jan Vermeer, Jan Van Goyen, Jacob Van Ruisdael and Gerard Dou. I've come across several other applications of color slide art on a personal level because it is such a convenient, economical and accurate way to show paintings.

In one case, an art lover who had vacationed abroad several years ago made the acquaintance of several Italian artists whose work he admired. Through the years, the artist photographed their finished paintings and sent color slides to their American friend. He bought the ones that suited his fancy and thus,

QUESTION: I have been reading your column for some time and have used to good advantage some of the advice you gave to other people. Now I have a specific question of my own. I have a house covered with asbestos shingles and would like to repaint them.

I notice that some houses with repainted asbestos shingles are beginning to peel and I would like to avoid this. Can you tell me which paint is best for this type of paint job?

ANSWER: The peeling of the paint on asbestos shingles could have been due to a number of reasons, among them using the wrong type paint and failing to remove surface powder from the shingles. You will get good results on asbestos shingles with either a solvent-thinned resin paint of the type generally used on swimming pools or an exterior latex paint. An oil or alkyl paint can be used if a coat of solvent-thinned resin primer is applied first.

The swimming pool paint has good hiding power, is water resistant and helps to resist corrosion of any metal to which it is applied. The exterior latex is easy to put on, does not require a completely dry surface and dries rapidly.

through photography, eliminated the uncertainty and expense that the transaction might have entailed otherwise.

In another case, a neighbor called in an artist to paint a mural in the home. To show examples of his style and rendition of different subject matter, the artist showed a series of slides of work he had already done in other homes. The color slides made it easier to reach a decision and clinched the deal. It was easier, certainly, than hauling original paintings around for the artist or visiting various homes to study the results for his neighbor.

In any event, while a home may not be a castle, it can, through color slides, be an art museum.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

New Plants Are Hardy

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Many readers of the column are now growing some of the newer bulbs and plants like scilla peruviana, the newer spider-lilies (lycoris) winter iris, different kinds of acanthus, sternbergia and others. All of these plants had been grown for 10 to 30 years by your columnist before they were recommended, and it is comforting to see that they have not been destroyed by the last few extremely cold winters.

Extremely low temperature does damage tender plants to some extent. The ones with evergreen leaves suffer most. Their leaves are apt to be cold-killed when the plants are grown in exposed places where the morning sun strikes the foliage while it is still frozen. For this reason, these plants are best grown under the high shade of trees or with at least the protection of large shrubs.

On very cold nights the earth gives off its heat into the air. Citrus growers who battle for their crops of oranges during cold winters know that even a slight cloudiness in the sky helps to save the fruit.

PROTECTION

In our gardens, radiation

of heat from flower beds is held down considerably by the presence of trees overhead. This is well demonstrated by hardness tests your columnist has been running for several years of the new spider-lilies. The ones growing in a bed completely open to the sky where the morning sun strikes the leaves have been hurt a little every year — sometimes considerably — and have not flowered like those in a bed protected overhead by trees from excessive night heat loss and from morning sun directly on the foliage.

Each kind of the new plants in question, reacts differently, of course, to the extreme cold of the past few years. Your big scilla peruviana probably had all its whole rosette of leaves turned into jelly during one of the cold snaps this winter. It is not dead, however. When warm weather comes around, it will send up new leaves and may even bloom normally for you. One of the remarkable things about this big bulb is that it likes to grow in low wetish spots and even survives the cold in such places. At home in North Africa it never saw Peru's it grows down in the waddies where there is moisture.

Man, Negro Woman Charged With Abortion

BATON ROUGE (AP)—A six-week sheriff's investigation of an abortion operation led Saturday to the arrest of a 27-year-old white man and a 33-year-old Negro woman.

Sheriff Bryan Clemmons said his deputies booked Anthony Ray Fort, 27, and Dorothy Connerly, 33, and they were held in the East Baton Rouge Parish jail on $5,000 bond each.

Abortion charges were filed against both, and the woman was charged with possessing marijuana, other narcotics and nerve system drugs.

Armed with a search warrant, sheriff's deputies went to the woman's residence. They discovered a patient in bed in the residence and took her to a hospital.

Deputies said the Connerly woman admitted performing the abortion Friday, and explained she had been contacted twice earlier by a man she knew only as "Ray" to arrange the operation.

Fort admitted, deputies said, taking the woman to the Connerly residence Friday. But he claimed he did not leave her there. He said he took her to Port Allen and let her out of his car.

Mineral Board To Open Lease Bids Thursday

BATON ROUGE (AP)—The Louisiana Mineral Board will open bids here Thursday for leases on 26 inland state-owned tracts and one state agency tract.

But the biggest mineral lease sale state officials look forward to is one to be held one month later.

Thursday's lease sale will offer 48,840 acres to oil and gas exploration firms. The one state agency tract totals 16.5 acres and the 26 inland tracts owned by the state contain 48,824 acres.

A Mineral Board spokesman indicated this offering was not expected to bring in any landslide of bonus money to the state.

State fiscal authorities have budgeted $13 million to come from oil and gas bonuses on state lands during the current fiscal year. So far, lease sales have brought in close to $6.5 million from something over 11,000 acres.

A March 21 lease sale will offer 12 tracts of the Rockefeller Wildlife and Game Preserve, located along the coast line of Cameron and Vermilion parishes.

A Mineral Board spokesman said the lease sale was the culmination of about 30 months of staff work.

Pep Club Made Ill By Carbon Monoxide Gas

DENVER (AP)—Thirty-eight members of a high school girls pep club were treated at a hospital and released early Saturday after they became ill from carbon monoxide fumes on a school bus.

The Bennett High School students were returning from a basketball game in Central City.

As the bus traveled through Denver to the farm community of Bennett, east of the city, driver Floyd Hamilton stopped the vehicle when some of the 55 girls aboard complained of feeling ill.

A passing cab driver, Bob Kemper, saw the students kneeling and reeling and called the Denver fire department.

Rescue units administered oxygen and the girls were taken to a hospital by private cars and ambulances.

MONROE MORNING WORLD

Research Aided By Engineering
If the house of science has many mansions, the prime impetus for remodeling and expansion is coming increasingly from engineering.

The unending stream of engineering achievements during the past several decades has provided scientists new tools and instruments with which to gather information about the world around us. These tools and instruments not only aid the scientist in gathering data, but actually make possible to expand and deepen the scope of scientific searching. Pick out any group of scientific disciplines—physics, biology, astronomy, for example—and the contributions of technological developments to each field can be seen to be substantial. Indeed, these contributions have often pushed certain sciences forward from a position of relative stagnation.

SCOPE OF PHYSICS
The general area of physics is a good place to see how engineering achievements have enlarged the whole scope of the science. The power-packed atom offers a spectacular example of physical theory being put to work, but it also has given physicists a means by which to study the atom itself, and probe deeply into the nature of matter and energy. Physicists now count something like 30 subatomic particles, all currently being studied by instrumentation developed in connection with nuclear reactors or particle accelerators.

The latter device is essentially an immense circular magnetic field in which subatomic particles are accelerated at velocities approaching the speed of light. From these experiments, physicists have discovered new subatomic particles, and verified the existence of other particles, which previously had been suspected of lurking deep within the atomic nucleus. In point of fact, the number of minute particles which have been flung out of the atom in the atomic nucleus has given physicists more "things" to account for than can be incorporated into present nuclear theory.

COMPUTERS
The use of electronic computers—each a highly engineered thinking machine—in connection with radiation and nuclear particle research gives physicists a practical way to handle complex mathematical analyses brought to bear on problems which would be far too cumbersome to handle without the computers.

In the biological area, engineering achievements have enabled scientists to move away from merely classifying and naming species, organs, and tissue structure and into the realm of factual description of what electrochem-

Complex Role Of Engineer Is Described
By J. H. SNEAD
Editor, Southern Equipment and Tractor Co.

The role of the communications engineer has become increasingly important in the modern world. The engineer is no longer confined to the design of mechanical devices, but is now called upon to design systems that integrate mechanical, electrical, and communications engineering. This is a complex role, and one that requires a high degree of skill and knowledge. The engineer must be able to design systems that are reliable, efficient, and capable of meeting the needs of the user. This is a challenging task, and one that requires a high degree of creativity and innovation. The engineer must be able to design systems that are capable of operating in a wide range of environments, and that are able to adapt to changing conditions. This is a complex role, and one that requires a high degree of skill and knowledge. president of West Monroe, an engineer for Olin Mathieson, Paul C. Brown, president and chairman of Engineers' Week observance, resides in Monroe, and is employed by M. Kaplan and Son.

Dr. J. J. Thielen, second vice president of Ruston, is head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering at Louisiana Tech. Henry T. Poulain, secretary, treasurer of Monroe, is owner of Poulain's Electrical Company.

Many definitions have been given of the engineer, but he touches in one way or another, that the layman's image of him often is hazy.

The better visualization of the engineer and his work.

Observance Chairman Brown made these observations: "When we think of the engineer, most of us envision a person who builds bridges spanning rivers and harbors, who designs tall structures like the Empire State Building, who constructs massive dams and power plants, and who launches missiles into space.

"But the engineer, aside from romantic and heroic tasks, plays a vital and necessary part in our everyday lives.

"Without the engineer, our modern civilization simply would not exist. Without the engineer, we would live uncomfortable, primitive lives.

"In the modern moment we live in, the engineer and his work are the switch that turns on our lights, the force that drives our cars, the power that runs our factories. The products of his knowledge and genius make possible the modern world we live in.

Research Boost For Engineering

By VIRGIL ORR
Head of Engineering Research Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Ruston

If one only casually considers engineering research performed in conjunction with the higher educational efforts of a college or university, the conclusion might be reached that it's "very tower" activity and has little or no relevancy to the cold, hard facts of the business world. A close and searching scrutiny reveals, however, that these efforts not only have relevance, but very often have far-reaching results on the economy of a particular area.

DIRECT RESULTS
A well-devised, university-disseminated research program will achieve the direct results of training the future leaders of the nation in an important area resource—our youth. In addition to the training afforded students, monetary compensation for time devoted to research through student wages, research grants, and fellowships frequently are enabling factors for outstanding and conscientious students to continue formal education without being a financial burden on their parents.

Experience gained by students working with capable faculty members in these research efforts is available to the individual in later life as he seeks initial employment in the academic, industrial, or business world. Such experience frequently raises the salary offered to the graduate—a direct economic benefit to the student and his family.

NATURAL RESOURCES
Research performed at an educational school frequently centers around the natural resources of an area. In North Louisiana the mineral resources are important, water resources are of increasing importance, and wood products are important in their position in our economy. Research and experimentation pertaining to natural resources usually concerns itself with ways and means of processing and up-grading, means of conservation, or, in the case of water, preventive measures for elimination of pollution. Reclamation processes and techniques are of prime importance today.

Adequate transportation is essential to a growing economy; suitable and attractive structures commensurate with the economy of an area are invariably demanded. In each of these important segments engineering research on materials, designs, and fabrication have provided the keys that have unlocked the doors between the conception of the product and its ultimate existence.

FACTOR
The presence of strong technical education and research in an area has proven to be the deciding factor when industry has decided to relocate or expand. Industry brings people, payrolls, and satellite industries.

The funds spent for research, although for purposes seemingly unrelated to the economy of an area, have an indirect effect on an effort to reach the moon—"The money will not be spent on the moon, but here on earth."

Carbon black is used in many products, from rubber to paint. It is a fine, black, powdery substance. It is produced by the incomplete combustion of heavy petroleum fractions in a carbonization furnace. The carbon black is then washed, dried, and packaged for shipment.

Each year, about 10 million tons of carbon black are produced in the United States. It is used in a wide variety of products, including rubber, paint, ink, and paper. The carbon black industry is a major part of the chemical industry.

MONROE MORNING WORLD

There is something new in the way surveyors work. The use of electronic instruments has revolutionized the field of surveying. These instruments are more accurate, more reliable, and easier to use than traditional surveying instruments. They are also more portable and can be used in a wider range of environments.

The use of electronics in surveying has many advantages. It allows surveyors to work more efficiently and accurately. It also allows them to work in more difficult terrain and weather conditions. The use of electronics is a major step forward in the field of surveying.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — A new de-icing system that delivers a slow-motion shiver to the wings and tail section of light, twin-engine aircraft is about to shake off a winter hazard — namely, ice — for small plane operation, according to The B. F. Goodrich Company.

The shiver is delivered through rubber tubes on the leading edges of the wings and tail of light aircraft. C. B. McKee, general manager of BFG's Aerospace and Defense Products Division, said. The tubes alternately inflate and deflate every three minutes, cracking ice that has developed on wing and tail surfaces. The cracked ice is carried away in the airstream.

Engineering Grads Hold Responsible Positions

By DR. RUSSELL ALLEN JR.
At Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Baton Rouge, four graduates are now in responsible positions in the fields of geology and geological engineering. The B.S. degree in geology, the B.S. degree in geological engineering, the M.S. degree in geology, and the M.S. degree in geological engineering.

These graduates are now working in various capacities for the Louisiana Department of Geology and Mineral Resources. They are responsible for the collection, analysis, and interpretation of geological data. They are also responsible for the development of geological maps and reports.

The Louisiana Department of Geology and Mineral Resources is a state agency that is responsible for the management of the state's geological resources. It is also responsible for the promotion of geology and geological engineering in Louisiana.

Military Field Had Pioneers In Engineering

The pioneers in engineering were those in the military field. The term engineering once was applied specifically to persons who constructed engines of war and handled the various war service military purposes.

The civil engineering classification was also being applied to the middle of the 18th century. The 1827 charter of the Institution of Civil Engineers, of London, described civil engineering as the "art of directing the great resources of power in nature for the use and convenience of man, as the means of production and traffic in states, both for external and internal trade, as applied in the construction of roads, bridges, aqueducts, canals, river navigation and docks for internal intercourse and exchange, and in the construction of ports, harbours, moles, breakwaters and lighthouses, and in the art of navigation by artificial power for the purposes of commerce, and in the construction and adaptation of machinery, and in the drainage of cities and towns."

At Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Baton Rouge, four degrees are conferred in the fields of geology and geological engineering. The B.S. degree in geology, the B.S. degree in geological engineering, the M.S. degree in geology and the M.S. degree in geological engineering.

The future of geology and geological engineering at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute appears especially bright. The need for fundamental geologic research in the Gulf Coast region is unlimited. The development of the petroleum resources of north Louisiana is just beginning. The great need for geologic and hydrologic data concerning surface and ground water is pressing. The progress of these and similar problems is greatly facilitated at Louisiana Tech by the use of the electronic data processing equipment available. An IBM 1620 digital computer with associated equipment, a CDC 1600 digital computer and an analog computer.

The cooperation of federal and state agencies and of industry with the teaching and research activities of the Department of Petroleum and Geological Engineering is of a high order and continuing progress in the fields of geologic education and research is to be of paramount consideration at Louisiana Tech.

DEAR LADIES:

Only once every three or four months do we publish a recipe which has been tried, true, tested and loved! Here is one called Bootleggers' Beans. It's cheap, it's quick, and it's delish!

Dice three strips of bacon and fry. When about half done, add a small chopped onion.

When the onion is slightly browned, pour off most of the grease and add one can of pork and beans in tomato sauce, one tablespoon of brown sugar, two tablespoons of vinegar, two tablespoons of catsup, stir well and cover. Let this simmer make completely different dishes! I added a little chili powder one day to the pork and beans recipe and it was hot and tangy. This is wonderful when mixed all together on top of the stove, poured in a greased casserole dish and baked in the oven.

DEAR HELOISE:

To hang spaghetti-strap dresses... Just take any wooden coat hanger and cut small notches in each end of the wood where the straps will fit. The "spaghetti" won't dare fall off!

DEAR HELOISE:

Being from the south we use lots of ice. Rather than empty a tray each time when ice is needed, I empty all of my trays and put the ice in a brown paper bag. Then fill the trays and set them back in the refrigerator.

By using a brown paper bag instead of a plastic bag, the ice does not stick together. I try to put the ice in the bag without wetting it. This will help prevent it from sticking together, and you will find that you can take out one piece or ten, whatever you need!

Reader

I never knew that ice could be put in a brown paper bag or sack, as she calls them. I tried it and it actually works! In fact, when you open your freezer, the brown paper bag is much easier to find.

I sprinkle my sink with cleanser when doing dinner dishes, then scrub it, but I do not rinse out my dishcloth.

I just rinse the sink out with plain water.

I let the cloth dry until morning. When dry, wet it again the next morning and clean your bathroom, sink and tub, and then any water-spotted tile. When all of this is done, I just rinse my cloth, and it's bleached. It stays white without bleaching again.

if a recipe calls for two eggs and all I happen to have in the house are small eggs, if I use three, it is ever so much better.

DEAR HELOISE:

For those of you who have old bridge tables that are marred, scratched and ragged... I have found that you can take a can of spray paint—that's some of those fizz cans—and repaint the top of the card table.

I used clear enamel paint for this. My table is clean, slick and real nice and can now be washed with a sponge.

Sure makes for a new card table when the budget doesn't call for one.

DEAR HELOISE:

When freezing food in my deep freeze, I have found that if I line my casseroles with a plastic bag, pour in part of the food... lay another piece of plastic on top of this... and then continue filling the bowl until it is full, and freezing all of this, the thin piece of plastic will later divide the frozen food!

This is great for those who like to make a double order of anything! After the food is frozen, all one has to do is bang it either on the counter or edge of the kitchen sink, and it falls apart like magic... It saves much time and it thaws out more quickly than if it had been frozen in one solid piece.

DEAR HELOISE:

Listen to this! When squeezing oranges, lemons or limes for drinks, etc. I pour it through a piece of nylon net! By using nylon, all that is required is a slight rinse under the faucet, a quick shake of the wrist, and replace it in your kitchen drawer.

IT'LL TAKE YEARS AND A MINT OF MONEY TO FILL THIS BIG PLACE!

MAMA... I FOUND A COUPLE OF WOODEN HORSES THE WORKMEN LEFT... WE COULD USE THEM...
